State DHIA Rescinds Oct. Centralization Deadline

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)—In a move to diffuse the emotional pressure against centralization that has caused an uproar across the state, the Pennsylvania DHIA rescinded its action to make October 1, 1992 the deadline for all counties to comply.

The action taken Wednesday at a special meeting of the state board of directors annuls the motion passed at their regular board meeting last October. At that time, the board had voted to provide service to direct members only after the deadline. This position has now been removed and the deadline is only a goal. In addition, the provision for individual dairymen in a county to apply for direct membership in competition with the local organization and the provision for individual supervisor employees in a county to become direct employees of the state has also been removed.

Organization officials said the move allows time for analysis of all the new factors that have come to light in the process. Many of these factors have to do with who owns the records, who can and who cannot certify records, who gives the best service, and what are the legal ramifications of agreements between states and the national DHIA.

The scene seems to have shifted to the national board meeting in January and the national convention in March. Hope is that the Christmas holidays will provide a breather and solutions will be forthcoming. But the saga continues.

Tour Encounters Worsening Conditions In Moscow

ROTHSVILLE (Lancaster Co.)—On Wednesday, December 4, six Lancaster area agribusinessmen boarded a plane at Kennedy Airport bound for the new Soviet commonwealth.

The trip, in response to an invitation from the Russian and Moscow governments, would cover a lot of ground—14,000 miles and a world of knowledge about the agricultural situation in that part of the world.

The purpose of the tour was to offer an exchange of agricultural information between the U.S. and the new Soviet commonwealth. In Moscow, the group spent four days meeting with government officials of various levels of authority, including the president of the Moscow region and his advisors.

Professor Leonid Rubin, Moscow University, was tour guide for the group, which included Amos Beiler, Leola; James Garber, Mount Joy; Don Hoover, Lititz; Dale Rohrer, Lititz; John Wolgemuth, Mount Joy; and Harold Zimmerman, Ephrata.

The meeting was held in the conference room of the former (Turn to Page A29)

Farmers Lax In Operation, Maintenance Of Manure Structures

Last of a series

Editor's note: Results of a recent survey of farms, published as a report in October this year, indicated that many farms using manure storage facilities had serious shortcomings in safety, operation, and maintenance. In Part 1 of the series in Lancaster Farming last week, the safety issues raised by the report were discussed. This article focuses on some of the operation and maintenance problems and ways in which farmers can seek help to correct them.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)

— Word quickly spread that there may exist some serious problems.

Several picket fences were falling down. Some manure structures were cracking and leaking. A few manure ponds and lagoons were overtopping, spilling contents haphazardly into the environment.

And some of those structures were too close to water sources for comfort.

Concerns about these isolated problems resulted in a year-long project to study manure storage facilities, their operation and maintenance.

Raise Worms For Better Crops

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a two-part series covering the 18th Annual Mid-Atlantic Conservation Tillage Conference. This week's article covers the tillage-emphasis of the program, while next week's article highlights a presentation on the bene-

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — The course of crop raising has gone full circle to the point where experts are now advising concentrating on raising earthworms in order to get better crops.

During the 18th Annual Mid-Atlantic Conservation Tillage Conference held Wednesday in Hagerstown, Md., at the Ramada Inn Convention Center, several college researchers presented the latest developments on conservation tillage.

The day-long seminar, complete with commercial exhibits displaying the latest no-till seeders to seeds, focused on the theme of preparing for tomorrow's demands for raising crops.

Wednesday, December 18, 1991
USDA DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN MARKET SUMMARY WHEAT PRICES MIXED, MOSTLY LOWER; CORN AND BEAN PRICES HIGHER WEDNESDAY ON LACK OF EXPORT DEMAND, FUND BUYING AND RENEWED HOPES FOR USSR. WHEAT MIXED. CORN STEADY TO 6 CENTS HIGHER. SORGHUM 4 TO 5 CENTS HIGHER. SOYBEANS 1 TO 2 CENTS HIGHER. WHEAT PRICES MOSTLY LOWER WITH WEAKNESS COMING FROM ABSENCE OF USSR BIDS THIS WEEK AND COMMERCIAL BEAR SPREADING FOR DECEMBER CONTRACTS. FURTHER DELAYS IN EXPECTED SOVIET BIDS FOR U.S. EXPORT BONUS WHEAT AND PROFIT TAKING ON THE BOARD CAUSED WEAKNESS BUT SCATTERED COMMERCIAL BUYING LIMITED PRICE DECLINES. FUND BUYING BROUGHT ON BY OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK FOR CORN SALES TO USSR, ADDED STRENGTH TO PRICES. NEWS INDICATING SOVIET BANK OF FOREIGN ECONOMIC RELATIONS EXPECTED TO MAKE LARGE PRINCIPAL PAYMENTS ON EXPORT CREDIT LOAN, DUE EARLY IN 1992, PUSHED CORN PRICES SHARPLY HIGHER. SOYBEAN PRICES ALSO ADVANCED ON FUND BUYING AND RENEWED HOPES FOR SOVIET PURCHASES. THIS WEEK'S STORM IN ARGENTINA, WHICH SHOWERED LARGE HAIL OVER AT LEAST 247,000 ACRES OF HARD WHEAT AND SOYBEANS, ADDED SUPPORT TO BEAN PRICES. ARGENTINA HAS DECLARED "DISASTER ZONE" STATUS BUT MUCH OF THE BEAN CROP CAN BE REPLANTED.

New Funk's G brand hybrids deliver consistent performance even under the stress of heat, drought, marginal soils or disease pressures. So you'll get virtually risk-free performance in good years — and in bad years.

Backed by CIBA-GEIGY research

You see, these hybrids are backed by nine years of CIBA-GEIGY Seed Division research. With local testing in growing conditions just like yours. That kind of research produces hybrids capable of standing up to anything mother nature has to offer. Hybrids that maximize your profit potential, while minimizing your risks.

Get complete performance

Plus, you get performance across the board. With big yields. But with 95% or better standability... 25% or less moisture... and intactness ratings under four. And you get all that in the maturity groups you need to spread your risks even more.

Limit your risks

Get risk-free performance on your farm today by calling Hoffman Seeds, Inc. You'll enjoy the peace of mind that comes from planting these new Funk's G brand hybrids.

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, December 18, 1991
Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were irregularly distributed with some sellers offering product while some buyers were looking for production. Trading was at steady prices but the undertone ranged steady to fully steady. Yellow skin line run breasts were available, extra product was harder to clear today than early week and buyers limited their interest to commitments only. Legs and leg quarters were adequate at unchanged prices. Wings were available with most buyers and sellers waiting for holiday needs to develop. The undertone for wings was barely steady.

Dec. 17, 1991
The market tone was generally steady, although the underlying sentiment became increasingly cautious. Buying activity was spotty with several processors and end users preparing for abbreviated holiday schedules. Raw materials were adequate with breakers often willing to sell eggs into grading channels. Floor stocks were in good balance to satisfy current trade inquiry.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

DEC. 23-29, 1991

Mexican Feast of the Radishes, Dec. 23.

Dec 23, 1938, a historical review at Carnegie Hall, From Spiritual to Swing, introduces the public to boogie-woogie music. Dec. 25, 1651, a five shilling fine is ordered by the Massachusetts General Court for anyone caught "observing any such day as Christmas". Dec 26, 1836, the first settlers arrive at the British colony of Australia. Dec 28, 1869, William F Semple of Mount Vernon, Ohio, patents his "acceptable" chewing gum. The merry in heart have a continual feast.

Ask the Old Farmer: The other evening my husband and I were discussing sleigh bells, when we realized that we didn't know why they were used. So, why sleigh bells? PP, SC For the same reason that bikes have bells and autos have horns — to notify all hands that a sleigh was approaching. Sleighs don't make any noise, neither do horses' hooves on snow.

Home Hints Pour boiling water over nutshells and let stand overnight before cracking.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: The week begins with a snowstorm and cold wave, bringing a White Christmas to the Northeast! Partly cloudy and milder to close the week.
Greater New York-New Jersey: Snowy and cold through Christmas, then clearing and turning sunny and milder. Very cold with a few flurries for the weekend.
Middle Atlantic Coastal: The week starts with seasonable weather, but look for a snowstorm for Christmas Eve and Day. Then clear and mild, followed by severe cold.
Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Cold and rainy to start the week. Sunny and milder by midweek, but switching back to rainy and cold, snow west, on the weekend.

OPINION

The Christmas Story

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.) And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child. All they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

"Togetherness" Very Refreshing

One of the most impressive displays of farmer leadership and farmer support of that leadership has come out of Lancaster Red Rose DHIA's quest for autonomy in the state centralization process. The concern of these leadership committee members has revolved around the fact that Red Rose has a very effective and efficient program. Red Rose leaders do not want to see the county program slip backward for any reason.

No one can really blame these leaders for this concern. Consider that Red Rose has more than 58,000 cows on test in more than 1,100 herds. This makes their organization one of the largest units in the nation. In addition, the organization is run by a good manager, Jay Mylin, and has 19 supervisors and additional helpers, many of whom have received efficiency honors and many who have 25 to 40 years of service as Red Rose supervisors.

Also consider that the production level of Lancaster herds increased almost 1,000 pounds of milk in the last testing year and the number of herds over 20,000 pounds of milk doubled.

Red Rose showed a margin of $3,000 for the year has equity of $49,000.

Because of these facts, the Red Rose leadership looked at other options that would keep their organization together. In the process, conflicts arose--conflicts that the Lancaster leadership never really wanted or intended to happen.

Now, National DHIA rules and contracts have come into question, all because Red Rose leaders simply want to do what they believe is best for their members.

The affirmation that surfaced from the membership at the Red Rose annual meeting last week was heart warming. When Curtis Akers led the resolution of support for the board and committee, members showed a "togetherness" in organization that may have been unprecedented in the history of the dairy industry. The unity of purpose was clearly evident.

This level of leadership and responsible effort to represent membership is very refreshing.

To Pick Up Farmer's Tax Guides

The 1991 version of the Farmer's Tax Guide published by the Internal Revenue Service is available at your local extension office. Now is an excellent time to pick up your copy and begin planning this year's taxes.

Some important changes which the IRS points out on the front cover include:

- The standard mileage rate for business use of cars or pickups has been increased to 27.5 cents per mile.

- The self-employment tax rate for the year is 15.3 percent of which 12.4 percent is for Social Security and 2.9 percent is for Medicare.

- In 1991, the first $53,400 worth of income is subject to Social Security.

Every farmer should take time to read the tax guide. It alerts you to information you will want to consider when you fill out your return or will want to discuss with your tax preparer.

To Prepare For Safe Winter Driving

Winter is here! According to some people, this could be the coldest and snowiest winter we will have in recent years.

It is always a good idea to have a winter emergency kit for your car. Items for this kit would include an ice scraper with a brush on one end, snow shovel, jumper cables, blankets and extra clothing, flashlight with extra batteries, abrasive material (cat litter, sand, traction mat, etc.), brightly colored cloth to signal for help, and first aid supplies. This kit will be very helpful in dealing with a winter-weather-related emergency.

To Consider Holiday Safety Tips

The Christmas season finds us celebrating a very important event in the Christian faith.

We do this in a variety of ways. One way is by decorating our homes. Make sure you are following good safety practices. Make sure your tree lights have the UL seal.

When buying new lights, consider purchasing miniature tree lights since they generate much less heat and use less energy. Do not run extension cords under carpets. Do not use outdoor lights indoors because they usually burn hotter.

Turn off lights before going to bed or leaving the house. Make sure your tree is watered every day. Keep portable heaters away from decorations. Do not overload circuits on your household wiring system. Remember, electricity generates heat and, under certain situations, this heat may become hot enough to start a fire.

By following these safety rules you will be reducing your chances of fire. Also, it would be a good idea to check your smoke alarm and replace the battery. If you do not have smoke alarms in your house, I would strongly recommend you place them on your Christmas list. Smoke alarms do save lives.

Do have a safe and joyous holiday season.

A LITTLE LESS THAN GOD
December 29, 1991

Background Scripture:

Devotional Reading: John 1:1-18.

Both the commentaries I consulted indicate that Psalm 8 originally belonged to the evening service in the temple, when those standing in the court of the temple could see the night sky. I can well understand how the Psalmist felt when he said these words for the first time:

O Lord, our Lord, how majestic is thy name in all the earth!

Often when I look into the night sky and see all those pin-points of light, when I realize what a small part of the solar system we are, and even more, what a tiny speck is our galaxy in the whole universe, those words come to me as they did to him. It is then that I realize that my denominational loyalties, withered and pickled by my uninspired human imagination. It takes the vastness of a night sky, the fascination of still another universe revealed by a microscope, or the wonder mirrored in a newborn baby's face to lead me beyond my prosaic understanding of just how majestic are the finger prints of God in the world. I can see, let alone those evidence in the world I cannot see or imagine.

BIG THOUGHTS

And then, when I have thought those big, big thoughts, and tried to see where I cannot see, something makes me look from the heavens to myself and say:

When I look at thy heavens, the work of thy fingers.

The moon and the stars which thou has established;

What is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that thou dost care for him?

Two thoughts that seem irreconcilable: the majesty of God and the seeming insignificance of our human nature. The gap between God and our human nature must be greater than the length and breadth of the universe!

That is when I am always brought up short with the words of the Psalmist:

Yet thou hast made him little less than God, and dost crown him with glory and honor.

"A little less than God"? No, even allowing for poetic license, is it not audacious to say "a little less than God"?

ROYAL CROWNED

Yes it is audacious, but still, according to the Psalmist, it must be said. Just so that we do not miss his point, he goes on to say that we are crowned "with honor and glory." Only kings and queens are thus crowned and the Psalmist is thus telling us that each and every one of us is royalty in the order of God's creation.

We may not have any trouble believing in the royalty of presidents, kings diplomats, artists, thespians, sports superstars, entertainers, captains of industry, but that isn't what the Psalmist is saying. He is saying that to be a human being, a creature of God, is to occupy a place of royalty in the created order.

Wonderful! Yes, but also intimidating, for if that is the way God has created us, if he has given us "dominion over the works of thy hands," and "hast put all things under his feet," each and every one of us needs to recognize this divine potential and begin to live up to it while there is yet time to do so.

"O Lord, our Lord, how majestic is thy name in all the earth!" And how great is the potential you have given us!

In the rush of events, we tend to overlook the important friendships that are the true basis of business relationships. One of the great pleasures of the Holiday Season is the opportunity to exchange greetings with those whose friendship and goodwill are valued so highly.

In this spirit it is a pleasure to say "Thank You" and extend sincere appreciation for the very pleasant association enjoyed with you.

May a bright and prosperous New Year bring happiness to you and to yours.

N.E. Grange Says Rescind Hike

CORTLAND, N.Y. — A 6.25-cent per hundredweight hike in a federal assessment on dairy farmers should be rescinded because farmers will get nothing in return for the contribution, according to a policy statement authored by representatives of five northeast state Granges.

"They're paying for nothing, so why should they pay?" asked New York State Grange Master William Benson, one of the high-ranking Grange members in attendance at the recent Northeast interstate Grange meeting in Portland, Conn. "If dairy farmers are going to benefit, fine. But that's not what's happening."

A product of the dairy portion of the 1990 Farm Bill, the assessment increase is intended to help reconcile the federal budget deficit. Dairymen now pay 5 cents per hundredweight.

Benson and other Northeast Grange masters are spearheading a campaign to rescind the assessment by organizing a letter-writing campaign to Senators and Congressmen.

The dairy industry in the nation, and especially in the northeast, has experienced major income reduction, but the federal government has been unable to agree on a program to help. As a result, the dairy farmers perceive no return from this assessment, according to the Grange policy statement.

"This assessment should be rescinded as a means of helping to alleviate, in a small way, some of the economic stress facing the dairy industry today."

Benson was joined at the meeting by Grange representatives from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

How Does Your Herd Compare?

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — This data is pulled from Pennsylvania DHIA's mainframe computer each week. It is a one-week summary representing approximately one-fourth of the herds on test, as they are tested monthly.

These data are valuable from a business management standpoint and can be used for comparing your operations to the averages from almost 1,400 herds across the state.

State Acts On Ag Bills

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Several agriculture-related bills were approved by Senate committees last week, according to Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee Chairman Sen. Edward Helfrick, R-Elysburg. Helfrick said his committee took action on a bill that would give some farmers relief from skyrocketing property taxes.

Senate Bill 1290 would freeze the tax assessment and the county, municipal and school millage rates imposed on farms participating in the state's Farmland Preservation Program.

The measure would also ensure that those farms are assessed on the basis of their use rather than their market value.

The senator stressed that the tax relief plan would only apply to landowners who have placed their land in perpetual or 25-year easements under the Farmland Preservation Program.

"The tax relief bill would help ensure that those farms that cannot be sold to developers do not get taxed out of existence," he said.

The senator pointed out that steadily rising property taxes will make it difficult for farms placed in conservation easements to afford to pay taxes on the land.

"As the areas around these farms are built up by developers, property taxes will continue to skyrocket, as new roads and services are needed," said Helfrick. "And farmers who continue to work their land will have to bear the increased tax burden."

Helfrick added that the Senate Appropriations Committee has approved his legislation to enable the state to participate in the federal Farms for the Future Program. This program offers states financial assistance to pay interest on borrowed funds used to buy farm conservation easements.

Helfrick noted that this legislation is part of the comprehensive "Ag 2000" package that he introduced earlier this year, aimed at keeping farming a profitable business into the next century.

"Taken together, these two bills would improve Pennsylvania's farmland preservation efforts and protect valuable land for the next generation of farmers," said Helfrick.

Under the legislation, fees collected by the Department through certification and inspection programs would be deposited into a restricted account that would provide more money for enforcement of the Plant Pest Act.

The bill also establishes civil penalties for violating the law.

tomorrow's demands are for no-till farming as it has developed to today — contrasting on establishing earthworm populations and beneficial soil microbials through the management of crop residue.

Jim Kinsella, manager for the BASF Corporation Development Center in Lexington, Ill., presented a slide show and speech of his more than 15 years experience on his own farm with no-till farming. His talk presented a practical illustration of how a no-till system works and he provided testimony that the method is superior, in the long run, to current traditional practices.

Though his Midwest farm is comprised of large rectangular fields and deep soil, he said that a no-till system can be adapted to Eastern farms, though modifications must be made in the system depending on the characteristics of each field.

The gist of the presentation was that traditional tillage-based cultivation is a long-term deadend, while the practice of no-till methods offers long term benefits of increased yields, extremely decreased erosion, operating costs and time spent in the field.

In addition to Kinsella, speakers at the conference included Dr. Gary Steinhardt, an agronomist at Purdue University who reviewed research on compaction and yields following practices to eliminate compaction and maintain a low-compaction program; Lynn Hoffman, a Pennsylvania State University agronomist who discussed no-till machines, seeding rates and effects; and Dr. Lester Vough, with the University of Maryland's Department of Agronomy, who talked about various forages, combination-plantings and the resulting feed values.

Also offering programs were Dr. Ron Ritter, also with Maryland university's agronomy department, who spoke on weed control with conservation tillage; Dr. E. Scott Hagood, a weed specialist with Virginia Polytechnic Institute who talked on controlling specific weeds; and David Schertz, a national agronomist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Soil Conservation Service (SCS), who updated participants on the current trends in Washington.

The day finished with a question-the-experts panel discussion. Kinsella received most of the requests for information.

Kinsella has authored a manual for no-till farming in the Midwest, which was published by the BASF Corporation. Kinsella works for the BASF Corporation's Agronomic Development Center, which is located on his farm.

However, the master's degree holder said the company does not subsidize his farming income, even though he uses his farm as a testing grounds for practical applications of no-till theory.

Jim Kinsella, manager of BASF Agronomic Development Center, and author of a no-till user's manual, tells of his experiences and love of earthworms.

The catch to Kinsella's system is that he allows at least three years before a field being cropped with traditional plowing responds to no-till practices. He said it takes about three to five years for the soil and the soil worms and microbes to build up the tilth, tunnels and humus that can build the soil, instead of allowing to wash away.

Not on Kinsella, but other speakers as well, spoke of the severe need to reduce soil erosion. A field that has been developed under a no-till system can be virtually erosion proof, according to Kinsella and others.

Showing slides of his fields, crops, soil and earthworm populations, Kinsella seemed to describe a garden plot approach to raising crops and forages, rather than the crop field approach used.

According to Kinsella, the problem with establishing a no-till system is overcoming the threshold of damage done to a piece of earth when it was initially used for European-style agriculture.

Penn-Jersey Seminar To Focus On Top Milk Producers

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Dairy farmers are to get an opportunity to hear from owners of some of the best producing dairy herds in Maryland, New York and Ohio during the 1992 Penn-Jersey Dairy Expo, scheduled to be held at two locations.

The Penn-Jersey Dairy Expo is a dairy herd management and trade show which is sponsored by the county extension offices in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Organizers have traditionally offered seminars involving national and internationally recognized experts representing a variety of views and opinions on subjects of current interest.

This year's program is offered either at the Days Inn Conference Center in Allentown, on Jan. 8, or at the Oxford Fire Hall in Oxford, on Jan. 9.

Scheduled to start the day-long seminar (from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.) is Robert Yonkers, Ph.D., a Penn State University professor of agricultural economy. Yonkers is to talk about the economic outlook and management strategies.

Following Yonkers are to be presentations by a three-man panel of dairy producers from three states surrounding Pennsylvania and New Jersey whose herds were recently recognized by their respective state Dairy Herd Improvement associations (DHIAs) as outstanding.

Speakers are to be Roy Crow from Maryland, Ken Harrington of New York, and James Lewis of Ohio.

The afternoon session is feature a report on parasite control from Michael Sukhdeo, Ph.D., a parasitologist at Rutgers University, and a look at seasonal milking by David Zartman, Ph.D., an animal scientist at Ohio State University.

Of the top dairy producers to be part of the panel, their backgrounds and operations vary.

Roy and Sue Crow rent a 300-acre farm in Kennedyville, Md., from Roy's father. The couple currently has a 48-head milking string they milk three times a day.

The Crows had the top rolling herd average on Maryland herds with 90 or fewer cows for 1990-91 production year. Recently they sold 14 cows, but the larger herd had averaged 24,160 pounds of energy corrected milk (Maryland DHIA corrects for fat content), which correlates to an actual production of 23,868 pounds of milk, 859 pounds of fat and 727 pounds of protein.

With the reduced herd, their most recent production record came in at 23,945 pounds.

Roy is a 1977 graduate of the University of Maryland who returned to the home farm, purchased 23 bred heifers from his father and 11 others from neighbors to get started in the dairy production business. His first year-end rolling herd average was 16,000 pounds of milk.

The couple feeds corn silage before milking and alfalfa haylage in an open bunker with free access to pasture. Also, to slow passage, Timothy hay is added occasionally.

Top dressing is with grain or with a manufactured pellet.

For those cows making more than 100 pounds of milk per day, and all first-calf heifers, get 5 pounds of a 25-percent protein pellet that contains a rumen bypass fat and undegradable protein. He substitutes the pellet for grain on a pound-for-pound basis.

They also have a 105.5 BAA, 1.8 services per conception with 43 percent first service conceptions and a calving interval of 13.7 months.

Up in Troy, New York, the Herrington family operates Herrington Farms Inc., which includes three generations of dairymen — the father George, brothers Ken and Phil, and Ken's son, K. Jason.

The top producing herd in their area for a large farm, the Herrington business produces an average 23,696 pounds of 3.2 percent protein milk, and 789 pounds of fat.

That's on a 410-head milking herd.

The Harringtons describe their herd as a commercial herd — only about 30 animals are registered. They do their own breeding and, as of two years ago, have severely limited the purchasing of replacement animals.

According to Phil to tighten the control on preventing contagious diseases coming in on strange animals and infecting the herd.

They pre-dip, post-dip and milk three times per day. The ranged in somatic cell count over the past year from a low of 85,000 in the tank up to the highest of 160,000.

The cattle housing and milking operation is comprised of a large free-stall facility and a double-12, rapid exit system and a footbath located outside of the rapid exit doorway.

For crops, Ken's main area of concern on the farm, along with computer crunching, the family cultivates two farms — the gravelly soiled home farm of about 500 acres and a 390-acre farm purchased two years ago.

Last year, they raised 800 acres of corn and 500 acres of hay.

The operation has been changing and growing along with the addition of generations.

After installing the freestall building, the Herringtons went to three-times a day milking and feeding a total mixed ration.

Phil said he kept close track of the results and calculated an increase of milk volume by 16 percent, while he fed only an additional 10 percent of TMR.

To illustrate how the herd has grown with the addition of operations, Phil said that in 1987 they milked 326 cows; in 1988, 364 cows; in 1989, 370 cows; and in 1990, 392 cows.

"Now we milk over 400, because of the milking facility. We can milk 100 cows an hour with two people. I would like to milk another 100," Phil said, adding that after the facilities for a large herd were built, it became almost like a constant drive to use it to maximum efficiency.

He said the extra 100 cows could be handled easily with the 2-year-old parlor, but additional free-stall housing would have to be constructed.

One of the most frequently used dairy tools at Herrington Farms isn't a tractor, pitchfork or other common instrument of farming — it's their computers.

The three-generations of Herringtons in Troy, New York, are, from the left, K. Jason (Ken's son), brothers Phil and Ken and father George. The Herringtons milk more than 400 Holsteins and have a rolling herd average above 23,000 pounds of milk. Ken is to represent the business during a panel discussion at the upcoming Penn-Jersey Dairy Expo.

Awards, State Speakers Highlight Juniata Meeting

CHRIS McCAHREN
Juniata Co. Correspondent
MIFFLINTOWN (Juniata County) — The Juniata County DHIA recently held its annual banquet at the Milford Grange Hall. Members and guests were greeted by Charles Wochley, who served as Juniata County's DHIA president.

After a banquet, Linda Scibilia, the testing laboratory manager for the state DHIA, presented a program on somatic cell counting. Her presentation examined the accuracy of testing and whether it was a true benefit, or a paper benefit. The program described somatic cells, their possible causes and effects.

Scibilia's talk emphasized the importance of DHIA and its role in detecting problem cows with high somatic cell counts (SCC), and the relationship of high SCC to the potential loss of future milk production.

The lab manager also had slides showing the lab equipment, and she described the current technology and procedures involved with accurate somatic cell counts.

The Pennsylvania lab ranks above the National DHIA Quality Standards for machine accuracy and calibration within the national tolerance standards, she said.

The Pennsylvania lab also has some of the best and most-recent equipment available of any DHIA lab in the United States, according to Scibilia.

The Regional DHIA Area Manager Harry Fritz also presented more slides and information about the DHIA program locally and statewide.

Melissa Adamire, Craig Van

Horn, Terry Willow, and Christopher Yohn were recognized as the present DHIA supervisors in Juniata County.

Mike Beaver was also recognized for his 15 years of service as a DHIA Supervisor from which he has recently stepped down to pursue his own full-time dairy operation.

This year a herd management award was given for the first time to the owner of the most improved herd. The award is based on a point system comprised of criteria such as improvements in milk, fat, and protein production, and lowering of the SCC.

Russell Adamire of Mifflintown received the Herd Management Award with a score of 87 points which reflects his herd's 3,726-pound increase in milk production over the past year.

Myron and Mary Gehman and E. Marlene Peoples were second and third respectively.

Glen and Tracey Henry of Port Royal were the top herd in Juniata County for protein. Their rolling herd average was 22,789 pounds milk, 705 pounds protein, and 853 pounds fat.

Other herds in the top ten included, in descending order, Ken Deamer, Steve and Barb Wilson, Rick and Jeanette Saner, Mark Zook, Speerette Farms, Melvin Martin, Donald Adams, Daryl and Delbert Brubaker, and Harold Shearer.

Other herds in the county were noted for having somatic cell counts below an average of 200,000. Those herds included R.E. Shearer & Family, Timothy Lauver, James and Anne Faulkner, Gerald Hart, Steve and Barb Wilson, and Fred Shoop.

Under business, Glen Henry and Delbert Brubaker were elected as DHIA directors, Melvin Martin of Thompsonstown was elected president, Russell Dressler was named vice president, and Steve Wilson was elected secretary.

Tour Group Encounters Worsening Conditions In Moscow

Communist Party headquarters. Ironically, until a few months ago, it would have been unthinkable to even visit, much less sit, in the chambers where hardliners had sat for three generations plotting their strategy in strictest secrecy, according to officials.

"The devil has lived here for many years," said Rubin, in reference to the death of the communist system.

The group visited farms, an experimental station, and an ag equipment test facility. They were given a firsthand view of the deteriorating food conditions in the new Soviet commonwealth.

Hosted by Oleg S. Marchenko, head of the Soviet department for agricultural mechanization, the group was posed with the question — how can the new commonwealth feed the masses of its people, according to Marchenko, especially in the large cities where gardens are not available?

According to Marchenko, the ability to process and distribute food has deteriorated to the point of nonexistence. Government officials desire to see American farmers share technology, and even more importantly, to receive teaching by example with the Russia farmers, who are more aggressive and would desire to operate independently in an enterprising setting.

In the 120-mile region of Moscow, say officials, there are more than 17 million people. Numerous lines of people were seen waiting to receive milk, meat, cheese, and any other staples.

Group members reported that not one restaurant was observed to be open for business in Moscow because of severe food shortages.

The bottom line is, said Marchenko, if you see a food line, get in it, because there is something there worth having.

The group senses a "searching for spiritual direction, a reaching for something or someone to hold onto as most other 'secure' things around them continue to shake and crumble."

Officials say that most Russians are concerned only with survival, despite the years-long oppression. As long as workers are working, from what the group observed, nothing else matters. Proficiency is of little consideration.

The group visited a mill and feed processing facility which produced a maximum 2,300 tons of animal feed in a 24-hour day. No truck delivery of feed was offered, so all 480 employees were involved in the internal processing. Farm trucks, most in the 6-10 ton size, were lined up and waiting to load the feed, which must be ordered 10 to 45 days in advance.

In the Moscow region, wheat, hay, forage beets, potatoes, carrots, and cabbage were produced.

The short growing season prohibits the growth of corn for ear harvest.

The meals which the group was served in the university included cabbage and bread in every case, and potatoes, meat, and tea in most. Drinking water is rarely if ever served. And, unlike past visits, even brand-name American soft drinks were nonexistent.

PDPP Names Dupuis Director, Adds Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — With many expanding programs and activities, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) has enlarged its staff and reorganized assignments to provide a more efficient promotion program.

Specifically, Elizabeth Dupuis has been named communications director and Nadine Houck has recently been hired to take on the position of promotions specialist.

"Due to the creation of new directions, we wanted to increase our staff size to accommodate our work load," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Nadine will be a valuable asset to our program and Betsy has already been forging the communications leadership within our program."

In her new responsibilities, Dupuis will be charged with directing all communications activities of the program. These include the production of the PDPP's annual newsletter, press relations and brochure development. She will also be the coordinator of the PDPP's consumer promotions activities which include the PDPP's special June and July promotions.

Dupuis, a graduate of Penn State University, joined the PDPP in January 1989 as a promotions specialist. Prior to joining the PDPP,

"There is not one bottle in all of Moscow," said one Russian.

Another indication of the growing difficulty in Russia to purchase foreign goods is the country's sorely devalued currency. Under the present system, many Russians receive the equivalent of $5 U.S. dollars per month from the government, while prices for goods continue to skyrocket.

she worked with the American Society for Engineering Education as a federal liaison.

A native of Centre County, Dupuis was a former county Dairy Princess and owner of Jersey cattle.

As promotions specialist, Houck will be responsible for coordinating all of the PDPP's local promotion efforts. In addition, she will be conducting the PDPP's industry relations activities, including functions at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, breed association meetings, dairy cooperative meetings, and other industry-related events.

Houck, the daughter of Huntingdon County Holstein breeders, comes to the PDPP from R/K Agri-Service Inc. in Lancaster.

She graduated in December 1990 from Penn State University with a degree in agricultural business management. While at Penn State, she was employed as a senior student research assistant at the USDA Regional Pasture Research Laboratory.

A member of the National Agri-Marketing Association, Houck also spent one summer as an undergraduate research intern with the Queen's University of Belfast in Northern Ireland, where she assisted in forage and animal research.

Most recently, Houck completed a marketing research project for the New Zealand Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

DeLong Christmas Tree Farm Marks 50 Years

SINKING SPRING (Berks Co.) — A Berks county holiday landmark, DeLong Christmas Tree Farm, marks its fiftieth anniversary last year. Located in Brecknock township, it is one of the oldest, continuously operating Christmas tree farms in the state.

Started in 1941 by Charles Aubrey DeLong, the farm is owned and operated today by his son, Tom DeLong. "My father had incredible foresight. This was a run-down, abandoned old farm when he bought it," DeLong comments. "He saw the potential in plantation grown Christmas trees. Back then, 95% of all evergreens cut for Christmas trees simply were cut out of the wild."

Tom grew up just a few miles from the farm on what is today the Nolde Forest Environmental Education Center. His father was the forester for the Nolde family. "Back in the 30s, my father began experimenting with shearing Christmas trees on the Nolde estate to produce a consistently shaped, but natural looking tree. It is the appearance we still strive for today," DeLong says. C. Aubrey DeLong began clearing the land on the farm in 1941, and planted his first scotch and white pine seedlings in 1942. He and his family moved to the farm in 1947, and by 1949, sold their first trees. Ten years later, Tom, his wife Ann, and daughters Jean and Nancie moved to the farm when he took over the operation.

By then, Douglas fir was gaining in popularity as a Christmas tree so it replaced scotch pine as the number one tree planted on the farm. Tom also began experimenting with Fraser fir, a tree he became familiar with while getting his PhD. degree in Forestry at Duke University. As Tom explained: "Fraser fir was not used as a Christmas tree to any great extent then, but I thought it had potential. I'm glad we began experimenting with it so long ago because it has taken a number of years to learn how to grow it right."

Time is one thing Christmas tree farming definitely requires. On average, Douglas fir takes 14 years to reach eight feet, and it is not 14 idle years. Tom says many people have the mistaken idea that a Christmas tree seedling is planted and then cut as a full-grown tree 14 years later. "We wish it were that way, but there's a lot of activity in between if you want to grow a premium tree."

Quality is something in which they clearly excel at DeLong Christmas Tree Farm. Their trees have been displayed at The Smithsonian Museum, Longwood Gardens, The Naval Academy at Annapolis, and locally at the Berkshire Country Club. Last year, one of their Douglas fir was featured in a national ad for Ford New Holland.

There are two things DeLong mentions that people sometimes overlook when choosing Christmas trees. First, trees always look smaller in the field and on the lot than they do when you get them home. He suggests knowing what width, and especially, what height limitations are before selecting a tree. Secondly, it is very important to make a fresh cut across the butt of the tree before putting it up. Conifers sap over in a short time and the sap prevents them from absorbing water. If a fresh cut is made and the tree always has water, it will stay fresh indoors well through the holidays. Mrs. DeLong mentioned she kept last year's tree up until February 15. One other thing DeLong suggests is to use nothing but plain tap water in the tree holder. Tests conducted by the National Christmas Tree Growers Association have proven nothing works better than water alone.

As Tom and Ann DeLong look ahead, they see the possibility of the farm seeing another fifty years. Their daughter Jean, and son-in-law, Steve Custer moved to the farm three years ago. Steve now manages day-to-day operations and in 1990, Steve and Jean became parents to a son.

DeLong Christmas Tree Farm is located south of Reading off 222 or 625 on Gouglersville Road. You can easily follow their big yellow signs to the farm. They have a wide selection of cut Douglas fir, Blue Spruce, Fraser fir and white pine, from tabletop trees to thirteen feet. This year, the farm will be open to the public November 30 to December 24. Hours are 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM.

Perry DHIA Holds Meeting

ICKESBURG (Perry Co.) — The Perry County Dairy Herd Improvement Association held its annual meeting late November in celebration of the completion of 66 years of DHIA testing in Perry County.

After a ham dinner, prepared and served by members of the Ickesburg Fire Company, county president and state DHIA director Brooks Smith addressed the group.

He talked about the financial status of the state organization and reviewed several recent state board decisions.

James Garrity, from Pa.DHIA, spoke on the process of reorganization — the voluntary centralization and standardization of administrative DHIA services which many counties have joined and which is still being considered in other counties.

Perry County has yet to vote on reorganization and Garrity fielded questions from the audience on the impact of reorganization to testing fees, service and other program components.

In other business, county agent Dave Swartz and president Brooks Smith presented awards for high cows in milk and protein within age groups.

Those cows and owners were: 2 year old milk and protein: Cow

#51- 24,693 lbs. milk and 786 lbs. protein; owned by Perry Kretzing and Sons, Loysville. 3 year old milk and protein: Molly- 28,684 lbs. milk and 883 lbs. protein; owned by Carl Martin, Ickesburg. 4 year old milk and protein: Lilly- 29,592 lbs. milk and 947 lbs. protein; owned by Ken and Jane Benner, Millerstown. 5 year old milk and protein: Marcie- 30,192 lbs. milk and 933 lbs. protein; owned by M. W. Smith Farms, Newport. Aged cow milk and protein: Cow #490- 30,670 lbs. milk and 943 lbs. protein; owned by Nevin Rice, Blain.

The following herds received awards for top herd management within their production class. Over 19,000 lbs. rolling herd average: Carl & Brent McMillen, Loysville; Nevin Rice, Blain; Melvin Weaver, Ickesburg. In the 17,000-19,000 lb production class, winners were: J. Marvin Landis, Liverpool, Issac Wenger, Landisburg and Trout Brothers, Blain. In the 17,000 lb production class, winners were: Ron Fauth, Loysville; Jason Burkholder, Ickesburg;

Steve High, Loysville.

Perry County DHIA had 68 DHIA herds and 6 owner sampler herds tested by supervisors Mike O'Toole, David Shenk 111 and Walter Stydinger. The herds averaged 17,988 lbs. milk, 651 lbs. fat, and 570 lbs. protein. Over 4,800 cows were tested monthly.

Jason Burkholder, Ickesburg and Vance Kretzing, Loysville, were elected to the county DHIA board of directors.

Researchers Offer New Bull Rating Index

CLAYTON, Mo. — Canadian dairy researchers and the breeding industry have developed a unique bull-rating scale known as the Lifetime Profitability Index, or LPI.

Introduced in the January genetic evaluation run in 1991, LPI was created to give dairymen and breeders an easy way to choose the best sires.

According to Dr. Jack Dekkers, a dairy specialist at the University of Guelph, Ontario, "LPI is a measuring criterion that puts focus on the most profitable available bulls. It's an effective initial guideline for selection. Then the producer can make a specific choice from within that group of high-LPI sires."

LPI attempts to rank sires on the average lifetime profit potential of their daughters, based on the two factors that have been shown to have the largest impact on profitability: production and herd life.

LPI is weighted more heavily on production, Dekkers said, because it's the major factor contributing to dairy profits.

But to maximize the lifetime profitability of a cow, she needs to stay in the herd for several years. Even the most productive cows aren't worth much if they last only a couple of lactations. That's why LPI considers potential herd life in determining a cow's eventual worth.

However, since there are no direct measures of herd life, the sire's proofs for certain type traits are incorporated.

"Here some assumptions are made in the LPI formula," Dekkers said, "but past research has found a positive relationship between these particular type traits and a cow's longevity."

Current and future research will attempt to determine the importance of type traits more clearly, as well as that of other traits, such as calving ease and milking speed.

LPI considers a cow's final class, feet and legs, mammary system, and capacity — all elements which can affect a cow's ability to stand up to the demands of calving and milking, year after year.

Using the standard addition-and-multiplication formula shown here, the Index calculates those factors and them to a comparable rating scale of protein and fat yields.

LPI Formula:

6x (Sx fat proof + 6x protein proof) + 4x (3x final class + 4x mammary system + 2 feet & legs + capacity) = LPI

For example, a bull that is + 14 on fat, + 15 on protein, +7 final class, +4 mammaryes, + 8 feet & legs, and + 8 capacity would add up like this:

Example:

6x (Sx14, + 6x15) = 960 + 4x (3x7, + 4x4, + 2x8, + 8) = 244 960 + 244 = 1,204 LPI

An LPI score of 1,200 or better represents a truly exceptional sire, but even bulls with scores in the 800 to 1,000 range can be counted on to contribute to the long-term profitability of a herd.

"We want genetic progress to improve longevity, while keeping the emphasis on high production," Dekkers said.

Dairymen looking for sires that combine a profitable balance of good type and production volume can use LPI as an indicator.

Farm Disaster Payments Process Begins

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers may immediately begin the process of qualifying for federal disaster payments for crop losses from 1990 or 1991 weather or related conditions, announced Don Unangst, state executive director of USDA's Pennsylvania State Office of ASCS.

Congress has passed and the President has signed an appropriations act that provides $995 million to provide farmers with disaster payments for 1990 or 1991 crop losses.

Producers may elect to receive payments for one of the two years covered. Payments will be based on 65 percent of either the commodity target price or loan rate for program crops.

In the case of soybeans, sunflowers, and other non-program crops, payment rates will be 65 percent of average of market prices for the previous five years after dropping the highest and lowest prices.

Payments may be affected by the total of disaster benefits calculated nationally as the amount available is set by legislation and payments may have to be reduced by factoring in order to keep expenditures under the ceiling.

Qualification for payment is based on the results of severe weather such as the drought conditions which affected Pennsylvania agriculture earlier this year. Other severe conditions may also establish eligibility under certain circumstances.

Farmers will also need to demonstrate production losses greater than 40 percent if they had no federal crop insurance or 35 percent if they carried this insurance.

Most crops produced in Pennsylvania will be eligible for coverage including corn, soybeans, ornamental flowering shrubs, vegetables, fruits, etc.

Actual applications for the disaster payment will not be accepted until dates to be established in early 1992. In the meantime, ASCS county offices will accept preliminary applications for disaster credit, basic farm and production data, and other preliminary application information. All such actions will be subject to final issuance of program regulations.

"Farmers who experienced reduced yields this growing season should check with their local ASCS office to be prepared to file when program signup is announced," said Unangst. There are sixty local ASCS offices across the state.

Ag Secretary Wants You To Respond

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan is inviting comments from the dairy industry and the general public regarding the future of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's milk marketing orders, according to Acting Secretary Roland Vautour.

The comment period will run until March 2, 1992, Vautour said.

Federal milk marketing orders regulate the minimum prices paid dairy farmers by handlers of Grade "A" milk in specified geographical areas.

Since they were established under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, milk marketing orders have been modified periodically to keep pace with changes in the structure of the dairy industry. "Recently, concerns have increased about the cost, efficiency and rationale of milk marketing orders," Madigan said. "Are there more efficient, more competitive ways to give consumers a dependable supply of milk and, at the same time, give dairy farmers a fair return for their product?"

In a separate but related action, USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service announced the preliminary findings of its 43 days of hearings held last year on milk marketing orders. "I am not satisfied that all of the issues were thoroughly aired during the AMS hearings, so I am posing a number of questions to the dairy industry and the general public which are aimed at a more fundamental assessment of milk marketing orders," Madigan said.

The questions are:

— Would producers, processors and consumers be better served with less regulation or strengthened regulation under federal milk orders? What would be the impact of less regulation, stronger regulation or no regulation on producers, processors and consumers?

— What institutions have other countries used in milk marketing that shed light on our own system? Are there particular aspects of milk marketing that are carried out more equitably or efficiently in other countries than in the United States?

— Could contractual arrangements between cooperatives and handlers replace some of the functions now performed by the federal order system? If so, which functions?

— If federal orders are changed to impose less regulation, what types of changes should be made? For example, should the following changes be implemented:

(1) Lowering of minimum Class I differentials.

(2) Removal of pricing regulations that cause purchasers to pay more under the order for milk brought into a market than would otherwise be necessary to attract the milk to that market.

(3) Establishing the lowest class price under federal orders (usually Class III) equal to the federal support price for milk (instead of the Minnesota-Wisconsin price)?

— If the orders should be strengthened, what specific additional rules are warranted?

— Should the orders be terminated? If so, should this be done immediately or should the orders be phased out over a period of time; and, if so, how much time?

Responses should be sent by March 2, 1992, to the Secretary of Agriculture, Milk Marketing Orders, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

USDA Issues Tentative Federal Order Decision

Marvin A. BAUMER
Market Administrator
USDA Ag Marketing

Dairy Division

CLEVELAND,
Ohio — A tentative decision has been issued by USDA/AMS/Dairy

Division that proposes a special III-A class and price for producer skim milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk
(NFDm) under the New England, Middle Atlantic, and Pacific Northwest orders.

Such pricing is denied for the other markets, including Ohio

Valley, Eastern Ohio-
Western Pennsylvania, Southern Michigan and Michigan Upper Peninsula orders, in this proceeding.

The decision is based on industry proposals considered at a public hearing held July 30 through August 1, 1991.

Federal orders classify milk used to produce storable dairy products (hard cheese, butter, and NFDm) in Class
III and price it at the Minnesota-Wisconsin
(M-W) price. The Class
III-A product price formula is provided because it will more accurately reflect the value of milk used to produce NFDm than is reflected by the M-W price.

The changes will facilitate the orderly disposition of the reserve with these three markets.

Lax in operation

As a result, one thing was certain — many farmers were lax in the operation, maintenance, and safety of structures.

"If everything's going right, nobody ever says anything," said William J. Bowers, state conservation engineer, who helped write the report.

With the aid of conservation districts in each of the counties across Pennsylvania, the SCS study evaluated 99 manure storage facilities, including those with and without USDA/Soil Conservation Service (SCS) assistance.

"There needed to be an organized effort to look at structures that of Soil and Water Conservation, focused in on the design and construction of the facilities and found very little wrong. Of 99 farms, only 7 percent were structurally amiss. But the thing that jumped out at the surveyors was the safety, operation, and maintenance of the facilities, according to Bowers.

"We found out a lot of things that are not being done as safely as they should be. And some of those things we need to correct," he said.

Of the farms surveyed, 34 percent were routinely filled above design depth, 22 percent had overtopped at least once, 49 percent had inadequate or no safety fences, and 51 percent had no safety gate or stop. Thirty-three percent with that's probably not a concern," said Bowers, "other than the fact that they are that close, which means they need to be structurally sound and they need to be operated properly. If they are that close and they overtop on a regular basis, that's a concern."

Overtopping also concerns Frank Goodlander, who served on the project's steering committee that represented the Ag Advisory Committee to the DER.

"According to regulations, the facilities are supposed to have two feet of freeboard — in other words, you don't fill it completely, you have two feet that you don't use. In the study, they found that almost every one of them at one time or another overflowed."

Goodlander said that one of his concerns throughout the development of the study was the fact that many structures were built too close to water supplies. In the study, said Goodlander, about 20 percent of the facilities were located within 30 or 40 feet of water wells.

Needs follow-up

"My feeling is that they need to do a study on groundwater pollution as a result of these facilities," he said. "There will be something to come out of this as to a follow-up in order to correct some of the problems with safety and maintenance."

About nine storage facilities were located within 50 feet of a stream, according to the report. Twenty-five farms are reported within 200 feet of a stream. Approximately 51 percent of the manure storage facilities in the study are within 200 feet of a water source.

"I don't think you're going to get a manure storage facility farther away than 200 feet," said Robert J. Thompson, agricultural engineer with the Lebanon Co. SCS office, who analyzed the data and helped write the report. "And within your farmstead you're going to have a well, and if you're going to have manure storage, you're going to have a manure storage facility near your farmstead."

According to the SCS engineers, the type of facility constructed has a lot to do with its safety factor near water sources. A sealed concrete structure if constructed well will stand up to scrutiny within 50 feet of a water source.

Manure storage facilities were under scrutiny during a special manure tour held last summer. Several farmers peer down into a manhole-like opening at the Jay Brandt farm in Bachmanville. The gutter scraper is visible above their heads. The grooved cement in the foreground drains a helper yard not seen to the left, and keeps all manure and manure-contaminated drainage from going anywhere else but down the manhole, like a huge french drain. Photo by Vern Achenbach.

ce. But a manure storage pond needs to be well-planned, designed, built, and maintained if it is close to a spring, well, stream, or pond. The design is determined specifically for the needs of each farm, and the SCS can provide assistance to farmers in designing and constructing such a facility, according to Bowers.

"Whether we need to make regulations or specifications regarding distance, we don't know yet," said Thompson. "Maybe somebody else would take this and go make manure standards out of it and determine how far away."

"No one can come up with the magic number as to how far away these need to be," said Bowers.

Of the farms surveyed, 34 percent were routinely filled above design depth, and 22 percent had overtopped at least once.

Positive action

"A well-constructed, well-maintained pond or structure within 50 feet of a stream, if it's catching the barnyard runoff that got in the stream before, I think it's a very positive action that the farmer has taken," said Bowers.

According to SCS, several factors, such as manure ponds located in limestone ground or those located in shale ground with a hand-dug well have different requirements. "If you have a cast-in-place reinforced concrete structure next to a well that is cased 50 feet to bedrock, as far as I'm concerned, they could be side-by-side."

Bowers said that you "can't make a nice, neat chart" for how close different structures can be to water structures. But the fact that a high percentage of the structures are close to water at all is a big concern.

Need to be concerned

"I think farmers are in a position where they need to be very concerned that the structures don't pollute by leaking or by overtopping," he said.

Other concerns include plugging problems on gravity loading systems, such as dropping a bale of straw into the pipe system, or snow, ice, or dry manure clogging the system.

Goodlander and the Council itself will use the information published in the report and provide it to extension offices and farm representative agencies to educate the farmer about the importance of

'If everything's going right, nobody ever says anything.'

had been in existence over the years to see how they were performing," said Bowers.

Jumped out

The study, funded by the SCS and the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) Bureau outside lots did not control barnyard runoff.

And 51 percent are near a water source, which concerns SCS.

Operated properly

"If they are being operated correctly and are structurally sound,

Farmers can learn about the proper maintenance and operation of manure facilities, as they did during a special manure tour held in Elizabethtown last July. Here, the terminal end of the 200-foot underground pipeline at the Jay Brandt farm empties manure into this 12-foot deep storage tank. Photo by Vern Achenbach.

Minimize Safety Hazards

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Many safety hazards can be minimized by proper design, construction, and operation of a manure storage facility.

The following procedures will help when building a storage facility and can be incorporated into existing storages:

- Keep in-barn pits for liquid manure to a minimum volume and divide pits into small compartments to reduce or eliminate the need for agitation.
- Locate pump-out openings for manure pits outside of buildings. Use heavy covers or grates for pit access points and keep them in place.
- Equip ventilation systems with an alarm to indicate power failure, and provide a backup ventilation system.
- Build railings for all walkways on piers or walls along open manure storage structures. Push-off platforms or piers should have a barrier strong enough to stop a slow-moving tractor. If animals are to be on a pier, install a low guardrail to keep them from rolling into the pit if they slip.

• If the manure storage is outdoors, provide a gas trap or other device in pipes running to the storage to prevent gases in the storage structure from reentering the building, especially during pit agitation.

• Install a fence around open storages, ponds, treatment basins, and lagoons. The fence should be tight enough to keep out small children. Warning signs should be placed near open storages and above-ground tanks, and a rescue pole and rope should be located conspicuously in the area.

Frank Goodlander, like many farmers, is concerned about the maintenance of manure on his farm. Goodlander tends the beef heifers on his farm in Lewisberry. He served on the Ag Advisory Committee for the manure storage study.

the upper layers of soil are released when disturbed. Initially, the release of nutrients results in good crop harvests because the plants can readily use those nutrients.

However, the plant nutrients locked up in the organic matter constitutes a base level — like a time-release fertilizer — in soils that provides season-long food for plants, regulates soil moisture and alkalinity, and not only reduces erosion, but eventually increases soil bulk.

The whole system depends on several tools, according to Kinsella, the most important of which is the farmer's brain, and of course, a healthy supply of large earthworms, otherwise known as nightcrawlers.

Many fields no longer have populations of earthworms. They are starved out when no crop residue is left on the field, they are killed by certain chemicals such as Furadan, used to control grubs and other soil insects which prey on the roots of plants, and there are other ways in which they can be eliminated, such as through continual plowing.

The reason earthworms, especially nightcrawlers, are so important to soils is because their tunnels allow water and air to infiltrate the soil so that it is retained and can be used by the plant over the season.

Small worms, such as common redworms are also important, though their tunnels aren't as deep, because they also provide hundreds of miles of air and water passages, like pores in a sponge.

In fact a sponge is what Kinsella attempts to create.

Additionally, because of their sheer volume and tunneling ability, earthworms can eliminate compaction problems, as long as farmers don't frequently drive heavy machinery on their fields and keep trips in the fields limited to the barest minimum.

Kinsella's system depends heavily on the use of herbicides, however, while the herbicide costs may go up, the overall cost of raising crops is reduced significantly because of the elimination of the need to use a lot of machinery and tractors.

He showed charts which compared overall costs of raising crops by both methods with the cost of business as usual much higher than no-till.

Kinsella said that many are not thrilled with no-till because of early attempts to use a technology that was little understood. He said he made many mistakes in the early years, but has since worked out those problems.

He told the group "Don't be the first one to use new technology, but don't be the last one."

The use of herbicides has received a lot of bad publicity over the recent years, which Kinsella addressed.

"Some of the chemicals we used in the past should not be used, but there are a lot of people who have an irrational fear of chemicals because they don't understand them."

Kinsella said he has to explain to some people that the herbicides he uses work by blocking the function of the chlorophyll (the sun-activated energy producing part of a plant) in the plant. He said he tries to explain that since people don't have chlorophyll they are in no danger of dying from these types of herbicides.

He said he also uses less chemical overall than traditional farming would demand and that he wouldn't use anything that would injure his earthworm population.

There were apparently several people in the audience who also practice no-till farming, as at least one "Amen," was said during Kinsella's talk.

The earthworm tunnels also help prevent the spread of chemicals, because the oxygen-needing microbes in the soil line the walls of the worm tunnels and break down the chemicals, thus preventing the chemicals from reaching the ground water.

Kinsella said that years ago, the thought was to try to kill the earthworms because it was feared that the tunnels they provided would help speed the travel of chemicals into ground water supplies.

"In fact, the opposite is true," he said.

Kinsella said he uses starter fertilizer everytime he seeds no-till, because, while plenty of nutrients are present in the ground, they are not in readily available form when the seed needs it. In addition, he said his seeding rates are probably lower because he is planting seeds exactly at the depth they should be and providing a more hospitable environment for plant growth.

An example of the results of his methods is a 200 bushel per acre corn yields he got this past year.

Although a user's manual on no-till farming is still being developed for use in the East, the Midwest edition can be obtained through BASF Corporation, P.O. Box 13528, Research Triangle Park, N.C., 27709.

Yogurt, cheese, ice cream and puddings are among the favorite foods of 6th to 12th graders, according to a survey conducted by Harris/Scholastic Research. Other favored foods include milk, pasta, potatoes and fruit.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends that parents serve children under 2 years of age whole milk, since fat plays a vital role in brain development.

improving the operation and maintenance of the facilities.

In addition, farmers can contact the local SCS office to look into options to help them improve existing facilities. New facilities can be constructed with cost-share money available from ASCS and the Chesapeake Bay program.

In addition, Bowers and safety engineers are working to make use of the results of the survey in the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) Manure Manual update.

"One of the purposes of the study was to get the information and what to do with the information," said Goodlander. "So I hope that we can do something now that we have the knowledge and information about it."

Levys Attribute Success To Feeding

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

CLEARVILLE (Bedford Co.)— James and Karla Levy of Clearville RD 2 are proud of their farming success they have attained in only six years.

"If we would just get a decent growing season two years in a row I think we could do very well," said Karla. "Since we've lived here, we've had one good year. The rest have been either very dry or very wet."

James grew up on a farm in the Clearville area. However, when the family farm barn burned, his father sold off the land.

"Farming was something I wanted to do," he explained. "So, Karla and I started looking for a place of our own. When we found this one, we bought in quickly."

While Karla did not grow up on a farm, she said she has adapted to farm life and, "most of the time," enjoys it.

This year, the Levys won the top DHIA award for cow protein production, the "Best Production Progress" award and the Herdsmen award (a new Bedford County award).

The Levys farm is on 143 acres with about 90 being farmed. They milk 30 registered Holsteins and have 35 adult cows. There are an additional 45 to 50 head of young cattle.

James attributes the production increase this year to feed. "We use as good of forage as possible," he said. "And, we raise our own. We do buy most of our shelled corn. We also have a good genetic potential and breed for superior cows."

"We thank Agway for their advice in our protein award," Levy said. "We listened to what they had to say regarding a feed program and, it worked. We listen to all suggestions, then, we keep an open mind and think about them."

"In 1990, we had a good growing season and that also helped us to win these awards. The cows took off and started to do great."

The Levys feel that the 1991 drought was a bit of a setback. "For about six months we had almost no rain," Karla comments. "We only got about 50% of our corn crop."

James and Karla run the farm with no outside help. James does the field and heavy work. Karla milks with their pipeline milking system and the milk is sent to the Maryland/Virginia Co-op.

Their two sons, James, 10, and Joshua, 7, both help. "James is getting big enough to be a good help," Karla said. "He tells us we couldn't have won these awards without him."

Since Joshua was only one year old when the Levys bought their farm, Karla said she remembers milking with a baby hanging on her leg.

The boys both belong to the Chapman's Run 4-H group.

"Outside of helping the boys with their 4-H projects, we have very few outside activities," Karla said. "There just isn't time."

When the local elementary school had a Christmas play, it meant that Karla had to rearrange her whole day to get the milking done in time to attend. "We still ended up sitting in the back of the auditorium," she said.

Hints For A Happy Holiday

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Home for the holidays. For some people, the phrase brings a sense of anticipation, thoughts of good food and good friends. In others, it instills anxiety and fears of conflict.

"Some conflict is almost inevitable when groups of people are together in one place for an extended period of time — even in families that have strong and supportive relationships," says Dr. Billie Frazier, a human development specialist with the Cooperative Extension Service, Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"Such conflict tends to occur over issues involving power and control, values and attitudes, respect, gratitude, lifestyles and — especially this year — money. The conflict can affect anyone — from teen-agers home from college to parents playing host to several generations."

Although there is no such thing as a perfect visit, there are ways to defuse family tensions and increase the probability of a pleasant visit. They involve planning ahead and a willingness to change (at least temporarily) old behavior patterns that cause strife among family members.

Dr. Frazier recommends the following guidelines, which she adapted from research appearing in the November 1988 issue of Psychology Today:

- * Have realistic expectations;

discuss your expectations and those of your relatives ahead of time to avoid any surprises and misunderstandings.

- * Plan your visit for the optimal length of time — not too long and not too short.

- * Alternate time together with time alone. Take walks. Go to another room and read a book.

- * Think about possible disagreements that could arise and how you will respond if and when they do.

- * Realize that people have different attitudes and beliefs and that maintaining a valued relationship is frequently more important than winning an argument.

- * Maintain a sense of humor. Laugh at the small stuff, and learn to laugh at yourself.

- * Develop or maintain mutual respect across generations for different values and needs.

- * Be considerate. Do not tie up the telephone or monopolize the television.

- * Respect the rules of the house, and abide by them.

Merry Christmas

In the tradition of Christmas cheer, we'd like to extend our sincere thanks for your friendship this past year. May your season abound with love.

Farm Toys Are On This Woman's Wish List

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

GLEN ROCK (York Co.)—

While children around the world are busy making "wish" lists for Santa, Hazel Walker keeps a "have" list of her toys.

Hazel, an enthusiastic collector of toy farm equipment, maintains a careful record of her machinery lineup in a small notebook. With each new -- or old -- piece she acquires, the Glen Rock farm woman swells her "black book" list with pertinent details of the transaction.

Though she began collecting less than 10 years ago, Hazel has put together an impressive array of farm machinery toys in all sizes, colors, makes and models. They range from the 1/64-scale size, so small a combine easily fits into a child's palm, to the 1/16-scale loved by farm youngsters for imitating dad's field chores.

While many farm -- and non-farm -- men collect toy farm equipment and trucks, Hazel is one of a far fewer number of women who enjoy this hobby.

Years ago, Hazel admired a plastic Farmall Model M toy tractor owned by a neighbor. After the neighbor's death, his son gave her the old toy as a gift. It became part of the impetus to add another, and another -- and the collection hasn't stopped growing.

Unlike junior farmers across the country with toy equipment on their Christmas lists, Hazel doesn't wait for the holiday season to expand her collection.

"If I see something, I'm going to get it," she grins. "I don't wait for a special occasion." Her enthusiasm has gotten Hazel well acquainted with area equipment dealerships, where she makes frequent contacts about new toy introductions.

Some of Hazel's farm toys are several decades old. A large, tin, toy tractor, missing only some paint on the top where little hands probably maneuvered it through imaginary fields, is a favorite of the more vintage lineup. A smaller, plastic model, bearing the molded-in name of the Hubley company, also dates back at least a generation.

Five years ago, she purchased a box of assorted old toys from a young acquaintance. In it were treasures that included a to-scale corn picker implement which has been fitted to an appropriate tractor, and a three-bottom plow complete with a toothpick for a hitch pin.

Holding a special place in the collection are two toy tractors which belonged to the Walkers' youngest son, Larry, 24. The Allis-Chalmers 190 and International 1026 have been painstakingly restored by an acquaintance of the Walkers.

"Restoring toys is like restoring regular equipment. They have to be torn apart and repainted. Sometimes parts have to be replaced," Hazel explains of the like-new pair of tractors, shielded from dust by plastic covers over cardboard frames. A feather duster helps keep the tiny equipment that isn't kept plastic-covered or in boxes clean and shiny.

Because her toy collecting interest is fairly recent, Hazel laments the loss of equipment toys played with and loved by her husband, Norman, and her older children. Leroy, 35, had a variety of farm equipment toys, passed down and added to over the years for younger siblings Dale, Jerry, Penny and Larry.

Now the toy tractors and implements purchased by Hazel go, not under Christmas trees or behind birthday wrapping paper, but on special shelves built by Norman and their sons for the collection.

Some of Hazel's newer acquisitions are limited-edition reproductions issued in commemoration of certain farm events, like the shiny, miniature Ford Powermaster made for sale at the 1991 Pennsylvania Farm Show. Special issues are also made by some equipment firms, saluting various years or other, large farm equipment shows. Hazel's commemorative tractors includes some from the Louisville, Kentucky, equipment exposition.

For several years, Norman participated in farm-tractor pulls around the region. Special commemoratives from national tractor pulling competitions also dot Hazel's collection, as well as assorted pieces she found at toy equipment shows held in conjunction with such events.

Along with the toy farm equipment, Hazel has a convoy of farm-related commemorative trucks. Several are issues of farm equipment firms, tiny truck rigs hitched to miniature flatbeds, hauling diminutive tractors in appropriate styles and colors.

Added yearly to her collection are the annual Hess fuel company commemorative trucks, ranging in style from reproductions of state-of-the-art tankers to early models of fuel delivery trucks.

Though not a farm implement, a large Tonka toy fire engine holds a place of honor among "Mom's toys," as her children teasingly describe Hazel's collection. It previously belonged to Norman's uncle, whose collecting interest focused solely on toy fire engines.

Another special item is a vintage toy "western ranch set," with a log cabin fashioned of tin, and plastic accessories that include animals, cowboys and fence pieces, all of plastic. In like-new condition, the set was a gift from a friend.

As interest in toy farm equipment and trucks has escalated in the past few years, the hobby-market-driven prices have climbed appreciably. Even the boxes are in demand.

"If you have the original boxes with the toys, it makes them worth that much more," explains Hazel. Thus, even when she removes equipment pieces from their packaging for display, the boxes are carefully stored.

"Prices are getting expensive, especially for some of the real old models, like the International 460 and 560," this toy enthusiast notes. And, it is not unusual for special commemorative items, like tractors, to double in value overnight, due to the limited number produced.

As her collection has grown, Hazel is becoming very selective about additions to her toy equipment and truck lineup.

"I started out collecting the implements, too, but I'm going now to just the tractors, because of the volume and the storage room it requires," she says. While not in the business of dealing toys, Hazel has, on occasion, sold a few of the limited number of duplicates on her shelves.

Hazel's toy enthusiasm is starting to spill over to other family members. Both grandsons, Matt, one of the Walkers' six grandchildren, and their son Jerry have an interest in collecting farm-related toy trucks.

The Walkers have farmed this rural section of southern York County for 37 years, on land that previously was owned by Norman's uncle. Since dispersing their dairy herd seven years ago, the Walkers now concentrate on grain cropping, feeding steers and heifers, and raising pheasants for private hunting preserve use.

Christmas Tree Success

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Your gift list is complete, right down to the last stocking stuffer. Christmas lights and ornaments have been retrieved from the attic, waiting to be hung on that true holiday symbol, the Christmas tree.

But before you purchase your tree, consider these helpful hints from Ray Bosmans, a horticulture specialist with the Home and Garden Information Center of the Cooperative Extension Service, Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources. MIANR is one of three research and public service institutions of the University of Maryland System.

If you're like most Marylanders — 64 percent, in fact — you'll probably pick up a Scotch Pine as your Yuletide symbol. These trees are generally 5 to 8 feet tall. About 10 percent of Marylanders choose a White Pine, with the remainder selecting a Douglas Fir, Colorado Blue Spruce or other variety.

Christmas trees are an agricultural crop, requiring careful species selection and 8 to 15 years of ongoing care as they grow. Prices tend to reflect the time-consuming nature of their production.

You can expect to pay anywhere from $20 to $35 for your tree, with a possible savings if you go to one of Maryland's "choose and cut" Christmas tree farms. For more information on these farms, consult the "Maryland Christmas Tree Directory" published by the Maryland Christmas Tree Association in cooperation with Extension and the Maryland Department of Agriculture. This helpful guide is generally published in Maryland newspapers the first week of December, and is available at public libraries, county Extension offices and the Home and Garden Information Center.

If you're going to buy a pre-cut tree, go early in the season and look for the "Maryland Grown Christmas Tree — Green, Fresh, Fragrant" sign and for the "Maryland with Pride" logo. This indicates freshness; none of these trees is cut before November.

Go to a Christmas tree lot during the day, when there is ample light to properly inspect the trees. Then follow these simple guidelines:

- * Check the tree's color; a gray-green or yellow shade indicates a dry tree.

- * Bend and pull the needles at the ends of the branches; if they snap or pull off easily, the tree is sure to drop its needles when installed in your home's warm interior.

- * Finally, bang the base of your prospective purchase on concrete. If the exterior, new-growth needles plummet, the tree is a potential tinderbox.

Okay, so you've picked the perfect tree and brought your prize home. Now what?

Bosmans recommends cutting two inches off the bottom of the tree's trunk (just one inch if you cut your own tree) and then immediately plunging the cut end into 80- to 100-degree F water. This is important because the tree won't absorb cold water.

If you're not taking the tree inside immediately, store it on the north side of your house (so it gets shade) and completely replace the warm water periodically. When you're ready to bring it inside, cut another half inch off the trunk, and repeat the warm water treatment.

Place the tree away from radiators or other sources of heat.

A plain, galvanized tree stand is best because it releases zinc, a bacterial inhibitor. If you don't have a galvanized stand, add a teaspoon of bacteria-killing household bleach to each gallon of warm water. Uncontrolled bacterial growth can clog a tree's pores, preventing it from absorbing water.

Avoid gimmicks — such as adding sugar, molasses, honey, aspirin or pennies to the water. They do nothing to extend a tree's indoor life. In fact, the sugars may encourage bacterial and fungal growth, producing an unpleasant odor.

Properly watered, there is no reason a tree won't keep indoors for three weeks, according to Bosmans. When the time comes for disposal, think about using the limbs as winter cover for your outdoor plants. You can burn stumps in the fireplace, or even stand the tree up in your backyard and string it with popcorn for the birds.

For more information on Christmas trees and other holiday plants, call your local Cooperative Extension Service Office; phone numbers are listed under county (and Baltimore City) headings in the blue pages of the telephone directory. Residents of central Maryland should call the Home and Garden Information Center at 1-800-342-2507. Specialists are available to answer questions between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m., Monday through Friday.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

A sort of guardian angel keeps watch over the open kitchen-dining-living area of our vintage farmhouse.

The halo above her head is of disheveled, straw-colored hair - with visible roots, a receding hairline and bald spot not quite concealed even with careful arrangement of the remaining tousled locks. Her garb is a lace-trimmed, yellow dress, faded from the years and with a ragged tear on the left sleeve.

Permanent smudges mar her smooth, flesh-like tones, though her blue eyes with their dark lashes remain shiny bright. Her lips are pursed in a permanent, small opening, just the size to accept the small baby-bottle accessory that came with her in the original, cello-wrapped packaging box.

This 12-inch plastic baby is a precious memory from our first-born's childhood. It's one of the perhaps three dolls remaining from the early years of a more outside-oriented "tomboy," who much preferred barn and field action to maternalistic play. In fact, the Farmer retrieved this baby doll some months ago from where it had long ago been abandoned...in the old barn.

A spare room in the house has been turned topsy-turvy in the last week by a childhood memory - and a dream - of our youngest. He has "reorganized" the stuff stashed there to accommodate a platform for the inexpensive electric train of his boyhood, track, engine and cars packed away many years ago. I've already been interviewed by this railroad operation as a potential scenery painter, succumbing after years of protests that we have no space for such a layout.

As they (and we!) age, the toys of childhood become the treasures of adults.

If you don't believe that, go search out some old toys. A recent look at a friend's toy farm equipment collection highlighted the value we adults are putting on our memories. Further questioning of several farmer friends confirmed what I suspected.

Farmers are still playing with their favorite toys - they're just bigger sized. Almost every one recalled their hands-down favorite childhood toy was either of the farm equipment or truck lineage. And one farm wife confessed that, though she had her share of dolls, she was more likely to be out with the farm toys.

The Farmer admitted that his favorite childhood toy... wasn't his. His heart belonged to a prized, die-cast metal truck and flatbed trailer toy owned by a cousin. When the cousin's family moved, and the toy was discarded in the housecleaning process, guess who managed to retrieve it for countless more hours of play?

And, while trying to reorganize the stash misplaced by the impending railroad yard, I found in a drawer two of my own childhood treasures. These two small dolls, one a bride and one dressed in the colorful ethnic garb of a foreign nation, are today's collectibles. The bride is somewhat the worse for the wear of numerous play weddings put on by small hands, but her companion in the drawer remains almost like new.

How I wish I had back the dollhouse of my earlier years. My brothers' windup trains. And the toy farm equipment which doubtlessly helped one to recuperate more quickly after emergency hospitalization as a child.

Today's youngsters seem to get so many gifts, so many things, that one wonders sometimes if any of them have much meaning because of the sheer volume of play items available. Will the fought-over Cabbage Patch dolls of a few years back, the space stations, video games, the dinosaur figures, or Teenage Mutant Turtles so currently "hot" someday stir fond memories when today's generation so eagerly awaiting Christmas are all grown up?

Someday, I'm going to give our children their previous toys at Christmas.

Someday. After they're old enough to really want them.

May your holiday season overflow with much love and many happy memories, and may you be blessed with a very Merry Christmas!

Let Nature Decorate The Holidays

NEWARK, De. — It's not coincidence that holly and pine are traditional Christmastide decorations. Early winter is the best time to prune evergreens.

"Most evergreens thrive on light pruning this time of year," said Jo Mercer, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension ornamental horticulture agent. "So you have plenty of opportunity to collect an assortment of greens, berries, cones and flower buds for holiday wreaths, swags and centerpieces."

Mercer suggests pines, arborvitae, junipers, false cypress hollies, rhododendron, magnolias and spruce as good sources for greens.

"But don't use hemlock or yew," the agent adds. "Hemlock needles shed too quickly, and yew wills."

Holly stems, pyracantha and cotoneaster berries create festive seasonal detail on a wreath or swag, as do cones from pines, spruce and hemlocks. Add a distinctive, natural effect with flower buds of andromeda, rhododendron and magnolia.

"Practice careful pruning techniques when gathering evergreens," advises Mercer. "Don't shear off the tips of branches. Instead make clean cuts at a main branch or node. The plant should look essentially the same when you are done."

Plan to make the decoration soon after gathering the greens, while the branches are still pliable. If this isn't possible, keep cuttings fresh by moistening the foliage slightly and storing in a plastic bag. Put the bag in an unheated garage or shed.

Some people use anti-transparent sprays such as Wilt-Pruf on their creations before they attach bows and other ornaments.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

Fruit baskets are a practical gift to buy for others and to receive. But sometimes a large amount of raw fruit can be tiresome and might be difficult to consume in a short period of time. Of course, sharing this delectable and costly wintertime treat is always an option. Another idea is to use it in creative dishes. Tuna stuffed oranges would make a fancy lunch or side dish to a more extensive meal.

Tuna Stuffed Oranges

- 4 large oranges peeled
- 1 (6½ oz.) can tuna, drained
- ½ cup snipped dried apricots
- ¼ cup toasted chopped pecans
- 2 teaspoons snipped chives
- 2 teaspoons snipped parsley

- ½ cup mayonnaise
 - 4 teaspoons dry white wine or milk
 - ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - Parsley sprigs to garnish
- Peel oranges and place stem side up. Carefully cut each orange in quarters, cutting to but not through bottom of orange. Hold the orange back in its original shape and cut in quarters again, forming 8 wedges in all. Place the orange on saucers and gently press down in center so that wedges open to form "petals" with a cup of salad in the center. The tuna filling gets a flavor boost from pecans, dried apricots, wine and a hint of cinnamon. Lightly pack some tuna mixture in a ½ cup measure. Invert the cup in the center of the orange. Microwave the oranges covered individually with vented plastic wrap. Garnish tuna mixture with parsley sprigs.

Honey Glazed Carrots

- 1 lb. carrots
- ¼ cup water
- 1 tablespoon butter
- Dash of ground cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 2 tablespoons chopped pecans
- Baking dish - 1 quart casserole
- Time at High - 10 to 12 minutes
- Standing time - 2 minutes
- Time at high with glaze - 30 seconds

Wash, trim and pare carrots. Slice carrots ½ inch thick. In a casserole, combine carrots and water. Cover. Microwave at full power (high) for 10 to 12 minutes. Let stand covered for 2 minutes. Drain carrots and return to casserole. Stir in butter or margarine and cinnamon. Drizzle with honey. Mix gently. Cover and microwave at full power (high) for 30 seconds. Sprinkle with pecans.

Twice Baked Sweet Potatoes

- 4 hot baked sweet potatoes or yams
- ½ cup caramel or butterscotch ice cream topping
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon

- ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ¼ cup caramel or butterscotch ice cream topping
- 4 teaspoons toasted chopped pecans, if desired

Cut top off hot baked sweet potatoes. Quickly scoop out hot potato pulp with a spoon, being careful to keep shells intact. Set shells aside. In a mixing bowl, combine hot potato pulp, first amount of ice cream topping, butter, cinnamon and nutmeg. Beat with electric mixer on high speed until fluffy. Spoon mixture into potato shells. Place on a serving plate. Cover with vented plastic. Microwave at full power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes. Top with additional topping and sprinkle with chopped pecans.

Give Safe Toys

NEWARK, Del. — When buying toys this holiday season, give attention to the safety of the toy and its age-appropriateness. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, last year children suffered 182,000 toy-related injuries.

"Most of these injuries were preventable," says Ron Jester, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension safety specialist. "But too often, parents, believing that a child is old enough or that the toy will serve as a challenge, give children items that are too advanced. The toy then becomes a potential hazard."

For choosing the safest toy for the age group, Jester offers the following guidelines from the Delaware

Safe Kids Coalition:

- * Do not give toys that have small removable parts to children under age 3.
- * Do not give stuffed animals with plastic noses and eyes to infants and toddlers.
- * Do not give children under 8 toys with sharp points and edges.
- * Check tape recordings and battery-operated toys regularly for loose or exposed wires.
- * Do not give children under 8 electrical plug-in toys.
- * Make sure toy darts and projectiles have soft, non-removable rubber or cork ends to prevent eye injury.
- * Look for recommended ages on toy packaging and follow the recommendation.

Party Time Ideas

It's the most festive time of the year. The air sparkles with good will. Hospitality, which often gets pushed aside by everyday routine, warms with the glow of the season.

What better time to have a party?

To help with the menu planning, the National Broiler Council developed three new recipes especially for holiday entertaining. All are finger foods, ideal for a large open house or a drop-in for a few close friends. Because of its high protein content, chicken is an excellent choice for hors d'oeuvres when alcoholic beverages are served. Or, it is light enough to accompany your favorite fruit punch.

Fill the chafing dish with Creamy Tomato Chicken Dip and place a bowl of hot nacho chips nearby. Made with ground chicken, this slightly spicy mixture is an appetizing blend of flavors.

America's favorite finger food, chicken drumettes, get special treatment in this recipe for Dijon Chicken Drumettes Deluxe. They are quick and easy, baked in the oven.

Sesame Chicken Nuggets with Red Plum Sauce adds a bright touch to the party table. The chicken can be prepared in advance and baked at the last minute to serve warm.

Smart hostesses who depend on convenient chicken throughout the year for wholesome everyday meals can also count on chicken for holiday party treats that please their guests and make entertaining a pleasure.

CREAMY TOMATO CHICKEN DIP

- 1 pound ground chicken
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1/4 cup catsup
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Heat frypan to medium temperature. Add chicken, onion and garlic and cook, stirring, until chicken is brown and onion is tender, about 5 minutes. Add tomato sauce, catsup, sugar and oregano. Stir well, cover, reduce heat to low and simmer about 10 minutes. Add cheeses, stirring and cooking on low until cheese is melted and well mixed into dip, about 3 minutes. Serve in chafing dish with warm nacho chips for dipping. Makes about 3 cups dip.

- 1 1/4 pounds boneless, skinless broiler-fryer chicken breasts, cut into chunky nuggets
- 1 cup non-fat plain yogurt
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon basil
- 1/4 teaspoon rosemary
- 1/4 teaspoon thyme
- 2 cups fresh bread crumbs
- 1 cup sesame seed
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- Red Plum Sauce (recipe follows)

With kitchen shears, cut chicken breasts into about 70 nuggets. In medium bowl, mix together yogurt, oregano, basil, rosemary and thyme. On wax paper, mix together bread crumbs, sesame seed, salt and pepper. Cover a 10 1/2 by 15 1/2 by 1-inch baking pan with foil; spray with vegetable cooking spray. Dip each nugget in yogurt mixture and then roll in crumb-sesame mixture. Arrange nuggets in single layer in prepared pan. Bake in 325° F. oven for about 20 minutes. Turn oven setting to "Broil" and continue cooking until nuggets are brown on top, about 3 minutes. Serve on heating tray with warm Red Plum Sauce for dipping. Makes about 70 hors d'oeuvres.

CHOCOLATE TRUFFLES

- 1 1/2 cups whipping cream
- 1 pound semi-sweet chocolate, broken into pieces
- 1/2 cup unsalted butter, at room temperature and cut in pieces
- 1 cup sifted confectioners sugar
- 2 tablespoons orange flavor liqueur OR 1/2 teaspoon orange extract

Her photos have won money, appeared on magazine covers, and won a trip. In addition to photography, she has won awards in poetry, short stories, and all types of crafts. In 1987, Melinda and Robert were awarded the Granger of the Year Award in their local Grange.

Melinda and Robert are in partnership with Robert's parents on a 500-acre grain operation. Crops planted on the acreage include corn, wheat, alfalfa and soybeans. Melinda is currently attending Lehigh County Community College to receive an associate degree in early childhood education. Melinda is well known for her promotion of agriculture and for her interest in preservation of the family farm.

QUESTION — Eva Burrell, Glen Gardner, N.J., would like help with the recipe called "Believe It or Not Bouncing Snowball bouquet." The recipe appeared several years ago in this column. It uses citric acid crystals and baking soda to make mothballs bounce in a centerpiece. Unfortunately, the recipe that Eva has does not work. I recall that some others reported difficulty with the recipe. Someone said the reason was that today's mothballs are missing an ingredient that was formerly in the old style. I think the solution was mailed to us, but I can't find the answer in our files. Does anyone know the solution?

46 yards baler twine

Directions:

Make 4 balls of 10 yards twine.

Santa Cow, Dairy Princess Visit Classroom

LOU ANN GOOD

EPHIRATA (Lancaster Co.) —

When Santa Claus did not have time to visit Lincoln Elementary School, Santa Cow went to school to hand out cookies, milk, Real seals, and cups to all the good boys and girls.

Santa Cow took along Lancaster County Dairy Princess Robyn Groff so she could tell the children about cows and milk.

She told the children about Geraldine who has nice brown eyes and a pretty nose too. She can toss her head high.

"She's not a girl, not a girl at all. She's a cow," the dairy princess said.

"To look at her, you might think she's lazy. She doesn't eat bread or butter and she hasn't ever tasted ice cream. She eats grass and stands on three legs. She chews and chews and chews. She looks very silly," the story goes.

Geraldine the cow was very shy, the children learned. They also learned that they should drink one quart of milk everyday to make them strong.

The children learned about the Real seal — the stamp on dairy products that prove it is made from real dairy products and is not artificial.

Dairy Princess Robyn showed a picture with a little boy, a skinny girl and an older many on it. She asked who should drink the most milk. The children learned the girl needs the most milk.

The girls admired the crown that

Robyn wears to show that she is a dairy princess. Many of the girls would like to be a dairy princess.

The students shook hands with Santa Cow and tried to talk with her. But her words only sounded like a mumbled moo—oo. Santa Cow is a strange looking cow because she is yellow and wears a Santa hat.

The children liked the milk and chocolate chip cookies that the dairy princess and Santa Cow gave them.

Each student was given a brochure with the dairy princess's favorite recipes. They are going to help their mothers make the yummy recipes that use Real dairy products.

Uhm...m milk.

Santa Cow is a strange looking cow, but she is very friendly.

Dairy Princess Robyn Groff hands out milk to students at Lincoln Elementary School. This is the school that Robyn attended when she was younger.

Cookies and milk from Santa cow — what could be better?

Student volunteers showed the Real seal to their classmates.

For Some Christmas Fun
Sing These Words To The Tune Of Jingle Bells

Dashing to the Barn;
In the old blue pick-up truck.
We're goin to milk the cows;
And try to make a buck.
Bossi's in her stall;
She's happy as can be.
Her udders plump and round;
and she's munching down her feed.

*OHH! Drink your milk, It's smooth as silk,
Drink it every day.
It will keep your teeth so white,
And skin so soft to stay AAA!!
Drink all of it, It will keep you fit;

And cause your health to stay.
It will keep your body strong,
And keep disease away.

Put the milker on;
And watch the meter fill.
She's doing well this month;
She'll help to pay the bill.
Let's keep production high;
And protein up there too.
We'll keep a good supply;
Of milk for me and YOU!!

*Refrain

Merry Christmas -

If you always wanted to taste corn cob or red beet jellies, then John Dochter and his wife, Betty, are the people to see. The Dochters market unusual flavors under the name Unique Jelly and sell them at craft shows, tourist spots, and by mail.

Unique Jelly Keeps This Fellow Busy

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
BROWNSTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — John Dochter made 3,000 jars of jelly last year. If you ask him for strawberry jelly, he wrinkles his nose and retorts, "Strawberry — anybody can make that. I like to make unique jellies."

So John makes jellies in flavors such as corn cob, red beet, dandelion, alfalfa, sweet potato butter, pumpkin butter, and apple raisin chutney.

Most of the pleasure that John derives from jelly making is watching others taste the jellies.

He and his wife take the jellies to craft shows and market them under the name Unique Jelly. Passersbys may sample the jellies on crackers.

Of course, some turn up their noses at the mere thought of tasting corn cob jelly, but others are curious and stop to sample the flavors. About 25 percent of the passersbys are thrilled with the unique jelly flavors. It's these people who purchase the gift-size jars for friends, neighbors, and themselves.

John, who is 65 years old, started his jelly business about six years ago. Before that, he barbecued pigs and chicken for festivals and other large gatherings. At some festivals, he roasted four pigs at a time and served 3,000 pork sandwiches a day at places like the Bavarian Festival in Barnesville.

But all that heavy lifting took its toll and when John had heart bypass surgery, he had to give up his barbecue business. Because he doesn't ever plan to retire and because he had made many friends at shows and festivals while barbecuing, John thought of a way to stay active without heavy lifting.

Jelly making does require the long hours and heavy work that roasting pigs require, he said.

His Unique Jelly can be made in his home kitchen, packed in his van and transported to the many shows around the state.

The only drawback is that John's restricted diet doesn't allow jelly. That doesn't mean that John doesn't cheat occasionally especially when he is experimenting with a new flavor.

On a sunny spring day, John can often be found in a field of dandelions at such spots as a cloverleaf where he picks about 200 pounds of dandelion. During the fall, he wants his corn cobs fresh, so he follows the corn picker to pick up 400 to 500 pounds of discarded corn cobs.

"The nice thing about my job is that I can freeze the corn cobs and dandelion until I'm ready to make the jelly," John said.

In his years of cooking jelly, John has developed many secrets that he isn't about to share. He knows what to do to keep dandelions from developing a bitter flavor during cooking.

For red beet jelly, John has one particular brand of canned red beets that he buys to make his jelly. Other brands give it an entirely different texture and flavor he said.

Where does John get his ideas for new flavors? "I think about it a lot," he answers. "For instance, I always thought alfalfa tea tastes pretty good so I thought why can't I make alfalfa jelly."

He did. And now alfalfa is his favorite jelly.

He said that dandelion jelly is the most popular with urban people while corn cob seems to be the choice of rural people.

Sometimes people suggest ideas for jellies. Although John is willing to try any flavor, he said he needs to take into consideration the availability of the supply. Someone suggested violet jelly, but John doesn't think he would be able to gather the amount of violets required.

Apple raisin chutney is often used as a flavor enhancer for meats and is excellent on bagels, English muffins, turkey and ham.

Next year, John plans to add a few no-sugar jellies. According to John, no-sugar jellies are difficult because they must pass a lot of government restrictions. Jelly must be 51 percent natural or added sugar; otherwise it must be called a spread. Butters must be 43 percent solids.

A commercial printer designed labels and brochures that John uses in promoting Unique Jelly.

"My dreams are unlimited. The business depends on how far I'm willing to take it," John said.

He ships his jellies all over the U.S. The jelly is packed in 8-ounce jars or in three-jar gift packages. He even offers a Jelly of the Month Club, where members receive an unusual jelly every month. Price: 1 jar for $2.50; three jars for $7.50 plus shipping and handling charges. Send orders to John Dochter, Box 191, Brownstown, PA 17508.

Retirement Workshop Offered

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — If you are retired, are about to retire, or are just beginning to consider what retirement might be like farther down the road, a two-part workshop called "Retirement: A New Life, A Different Life" can help you to make retirement a positive and productive time.

The workshop, developed by Penn State Extension Faculty Barbara Davis and Marilyn Furry, offers advice on finances and addresses other concerns about retiring, such as planning effectively, taking care of your health, finding the best place to live, maintaining relationships and staying actively involved in life.

In addition to discussion and activities, the workshop includes a video in which people who are actively planning their retirement share their thoughts and concerns as well as their plans for the future. Others, who are already retired, talk about their new experiences.

If you are interested in participating in "Retirement: A New Life, A Different Life, workshops are being held on January 8 and 15, free of charge. For more information contact Nancy Stevens at the Montgomery County office of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

PECAN PIE BARS

2 cups unsifted flour
 1/2 cup confectioners sugar
 1 cup cold butter
 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
 1 egg
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 6-ounce package almond brickle chips
 1 cup chopped pecans
 Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In medium bowl, combine flour and sugar; cut in butter until crumbly. Press firmly on bottom of 13x9-inch baking pan. Bake 15 minutes. Meanwhile, in medium bowl, beat sweetened condensed milk, egg, and vanilla. Stir in brickle chips and pecans. Spread evenly over crust. Bake 25 minutes or until golden brown. Cool. Cut into bars. Store covered in refrigerator.

SNOWBALLS

1 cup butter, softened
 1/4 cup confectioners sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 2 cups flour
 1 cup chopped M&M's chocolate candies
 1 cup whole M&M's peanut chocolate candies
 Beat together butter and sugar; blend in vanilla extract. Gradually add flour; mix well. Add chopped dough about 20 minutes. Shape to form 1-inch balls. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet at 350 degrees for 15 to 17 minutes or until edges are very lightly browned. Remove from oven and immediately press one whole peanut chocolate candy firmly on top of each cookie. Cool thoroughly; sprinkle cooled cookies lightly with additional confectioners sugar. Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

CRANBERRY WALNUT BARS

2 cups fresh cranberries
 1/2 cup sugar
 1/2 cup water
 1/2 cup flour
 1/2 cup brown sugar
 1 cup oatmeal
 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 Pinch of salt
 6 tablespoons butter, melted
 1-2 cups chopped walnuts
 Preheat oven to 350 degrees. For the filling, combine the cranberries, sugar, walnuts, and water in a saucepan, bring to a boil, and boil gently, stirring occasionally for 10 minutes. Remove from heat and let cool while you continue. Toss together the flour, brown sugar, oatmeal, baking soda, and salt. Add the butter and mix thoroughly; mixture will be crumbly. Press half the mixture over the bottom of an 8-inch square pan — it will be a thin layer. Spread with the cranberry filling. Sprinkle the remaining oatmeal mixture over the top and press it gently into the filling. Bake for 30 to 40 minutes until very lightly browned on top. Cool and cut into squares. Makes 16 squares.

Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas
Lancaster Extension
Home Economist

'Tis the season to be roasting... or is it anymore? The holiday season is traditionally one of food-filled festivities with family and friends. But as the 90's march on, some favorite meal traditions are getting their "marching orders." In a national consumer survey conducted by the National Pork Producers Council earlier this year, consumers said that, while they'd like to cook more often, they feel they simply do not have the time.

For the novice cook, the thought of roasting may conjure up a "State-Occasion" type of meal, like dinner at Grandma's — heavy, hearty meals featuring a large piece of meat, mystifying, daunting and impossible to carve. But savvy cooks know that roasting is one of the most fool-proof ways to serve a small group or a crowd. The only equipment needed is an oven and a meat thermometer.

Roasting, a dry-heat cooking method, performs best with tender meat cuts — tenderloin, loin and ribs. Unlike braising or stewing, roasting will not tenderize meats — so start with a tender piece of meat. And be careful not to overcook; it is hard to mask an overcooked roast.

The beginning cook, or the cook seeking maximum convenience, can choose a boneless piece of meat to roast. Boneless meat is obviously easy to carve; just slice and serve. A boneless roast can be neatly netted by the butcher or tied with kitchen twine to help hold it together during cooking.

Season the roast with salt and pepper or your favorite herb mixture and place it on a rack in a shallow oven-proof pan. A pan that is larger by an inch around the roast is ideal. The rack (this can be a cake-cooling wire rack or a couple of 7-ounce empty and cleaned tuna cans, both ends removed) keeps the roast from steaming or braising in its juices as it roasts.

Place the roast in a preheated oven. Many meats roast well in a 325 degree oven. Some cooks favor "searing" the roast in a hot (450 degree F.) oven for the first 15 minutes of roasting time, and tum-ing the oven temperature down to 325 degrees to finish. The searing technique gives the roast a rich brown exterior. When considering which method to use, remember that an extremely hot oven will be inconvenient if side dishes also require oven time. Check the meat section of your favorite cookbook for cooking times and temperatures recommended for the type of meat you want to roast.

Enter Power Play Playoff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, Pizza Hut, and the Hershey Bears Hockey Club have teamed up to sponsor the "Power Play Playoff" on the Bears radio network. The contest started at the Bears first game of the season on October 4, and nearly 30 people from Lancaster to Annville have already won prizes in the contest.

"We signed on for this contest because it offered an excellent tie-in opportunity for Pennsylvania dairy farmers and it's a great promotion of cheese," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Pennsylvania is a large producer of Italian cheeses, like mozzarella and provolone, both of which are used on Pizza Hut pizzas."

To enter the contest, residents must submit their name and address to the Bears Network. A contestant will be selected for each game. If the Bears score 2 power play goals in any period during that game, the contestant wins the grand prize, a party pack of Real cheese pizzas from Pizza Hut. Any contestants that do not qualify for the grand prize will receive a Pizza Hut Real cheese personal pan pizza, just for entering the contest.

The contest will run through the Bears season which ends in March 1992. Persons interested in entering the contest can send a postcard with their name, address and telephone number, to Radio Contest, Care of Box 866, Hershey, PA 17033.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program is a non-profit, dairy farmer funded, generic dairy promotion program. Further information about the contest is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

Maryland Holds Largest Wool Contest

DAMASCUS, Md. — Seamstresses from Talbot, Harford, and Baltimore County and City topped the field of 74 entries at the Maryland Make It Yourself With Wool Contest held recently at White Marsh Mall near Baltimore, Maryland.

Representing Maryland at the National Make It Yourself With Wool Contest scheduled January 8-12 in Orlando, Florida will be Mary Ann Booth from the junior division (ages 14-17) and Kristin Williamson from the senior division (ages 18-24). Both girls are from Baltimore County, and both received their honors on lovely wool dresses in fashionable teal blue and plum, respectively. In addition to their trips sponsored by the Maryland Sheep Breeders Association, Miss Booth and Miss Williamson received roses from the Baltimore County Sheep and Wool Producers and a cash premium and rosette from the Md. Agricultural Fair Board.

Patricia McHale of Baltimore City captured the adult division championship in the toughest competition of the day with 30 competing. She created a grey wool cape and matching beret to win the professional class and overall honors. In addition to the roses, premium and rosette received by the teen winners, Mrs. McHale won a $100 gift certificate donated by G Street Fabrics of Rockville, complimentary subscription to Sew News Magazine, and a complimentary membership in the Bishop Method of Clothing Construction Council, Washington, D.C. Chapter. Mrs. McHale also will be Maryland's first entry in the new adult photograph competition at the National Contest; should she win the National Championship based on pictures of her garment, she will join Miss Williamson and Miss Booth in Orlando, Florida, in January.

An ambitious 10-year-old from Talbot County, Amanda Brown, took the preteen division (ages up through 13) championship with a brightly colored wool jacket and skirt entry. Miss Brown also placed first and second with skirt and jumper entries, respectively. Miss Brown received an Elnita 225 sewing machine donated by Elna, Inc. as well as the items received by the other three division winners.

Reserve champion honors went to: Preteens - Adrienne Wojciechowski of Montgomery County; Juniors - Andrea Merritt of Harford County; Seniors - Kristin Williamson of Baltimore County; and Adults - Margaret Fielder of Harford County. Each was awarded a $50 gift certificate to Clearbrook Wools of Virginia, and a rosette.

A Judges' Award was presented in each age division to an entry that the judges felt showed extra creativity, special workmanship, or unique design. Janine Smick of Harford County received a Funlock serger donated by Creative Needle Magic, Baltimore, and Bernina of America from her two senior division entries. Gift certificates to Jo-Ann Fabrics went to Samantha Wilson of Montgomery County in the Preteen Division and to Tracey Wheatley of Cecil County in the Senior Division. Gift certificates to A Fabric Place went to Laura Langlotz of Baltimore County in the Junior Division and Martha Haley of Anne Arundel County in the Adult Division.

The aforementioned winners were finalists in their respective age groups by winning first place in the classes they entered.

The Maryland Make It Yourself With Wool Contest is part of a national contest program designed to promote the use of wool fiber, foster self-development, and encourage sewing and needlework skills. In the judging, emphasis was placed on fashionability, modeling, and the total presentation of the outfit as well as the workmanship. All entries met a basic requirement of having at least 50 percent wool.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Almost Christmas and it will be here on Wednesday whether we are ready or not. The cards are sent and the cookies are baked. There were enough decorations collected over the years to have two trees. But, the problem is where to put them. We considered buying one to plant outside later. This would naturally be a small tree and I could not use very many ornaments. My husband wanted one put in a picture window where my plants are placed. We tried to please both of us.

We expect Christmas to be a quiet day but can't say as much for the following weekend as we've invited our close relatives to an open house. If only half come, we'll still have about 50 people. But, we built our new house with this in mind and feel we have ample room to accommodate everyone. The living room and dining room have a large opening between them. And, our kitchen and family room are another large room with beams on a cathedral ceiling. We hope to have a fire in the floor-to-ceiling fireplace.

My husband is very good at building a fire and he enjoys doing it. I know that I can also get a fire started as I often had to do just that in our big wood stove on the farm.

My father was always very explicit in giving directions as to when we were allowed to use cobs dipped in kerosene. And, he should have been!

I'm remembering back to a Christmas when I was about six years old. My great aunts had given me a kid-bodied German doll with real hair and beautiful eyes. However, it was placed high up on the piano and I was not allowed to play with it that day or any other day. Tears did not get my mother to give it to me. Today it is worth many dollars, but I still wish that I could have held it in my arms that Christmas day.

Pork Video Makes Grade With Teachers

CHICAGO, IL. — Almost 40 percent of U.S. home economics teachers that use videos to educate students want a copy of the pork industry's first video kit on nutrition, preparation and animal care.

The Pork Industry Group's Around the World with Pork, funded by the pork checkoff through the National Pork Board, gives home economics students the knowledge about how to purchase, store and prepare pork as well as reassure them about how fresh pork fits into a heart-healthy diet. A segment with Illinois pork producer Bob Brauer also educates students about how animals are carefully raised to provide wholesome products.

"This is a very appropriate time for the pork industry to get this message about its much improved nutritional profile and new cookery guidelines into the classroom. School education programs establish a positive foundation for industry efforts to increase consumer demand," says Lowell Gemar, Fullerton, N.D., chairman of the Meat Board Pork Industry Group Information Committee.

The kit consists of a 19-minute video, teacher's guide, reproducible student activity sheets, wall chart of pork cuts and an evaluation form used to help gauge the program's effectiveness.

SHARTLESVILLE FARM SERVICE

RD 2, Box 1392, Hamburg, PA
215-488-1025

This is a view of the Roudabush farm with three grassed paddocks and sacrifice lot (on right with cow in it).

Three grassed lots on Gary Conner's 170-cow dairy farm in Stuarts Draft, Va. was one of the sites of the recent rotational lot grazing tour in Virginia.

Mill Creek Project Tours Va. Grazing Lots

STUARTS DRAFT, Va. — "Our barnyard was so muddy our kids were getting stuck and we had to go pull them out," was the tongue-in-cheek response of Gary Conner, dairy farmer.

Conner's 170-cow dairy was one of the stops on a recent tour sponsored by the Pequea-Mill Creek Project, a joint extension and SCS water quality project in Lancaster County.

The tour looked at the rotational lot management system on two dairy farms in the central Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. This system was designed to cut down the amount of bare ground around barns. Jerry Swisher Jr., extension dairy agent from Augusta County, initiated the concept in 1985 as a water quality best management practice.

The rotational lot system generally involves three small (2-3 acres each) grassed paddocks and a sacrifice lot. The cattle are rotated throughout the three paddocks based on the condition of the sod. This allows time for each paddock to recover for a few weeks before cattle return to it.

The sacrifice lot is a smaller lot which is used about 30 days a year when weather conditions are too wet. The grassed areas are seeded to fescue because fescue is a hardy grass that withstands heavy cattle traffic. In addition, fescue is not a highly palatable grass during the growing season, so cattle are not as likely to overgraze it. Swisher said that the benefit of this system was not to provide grazing for the cattle but rather to provide a grassed exercise area.

The first stop on the tour was the 50-cow dairy owned by Roland and Katy Roudabush. The Roudabushs installed this management system in 1985. Maintenance of the pasture includes occasionally seeding with a no-till drill as well as periodic clipping of the lots. Sacrifice lots are scraped twice a year to prevent buildup of manure and organic matter.

Scraping the earthen lots prevents them becoming the mudholes that used to trap Gary Conner's children when they went to bring the cows in. The primary purpose of this system is not to provide forage. However, some grazing does take place and occasional harvesting may be necessary. In 1990, 340 bales of hay were baled off two of the lots.

The second stop on the tour was at the 170-cow dairy of Gary Conner. The Conner dairy also had a rotational lot management system. This stop gave the group an opportunity to view this management system on a large dairy operation.

This farm utilized about 15 acres of pasture. This setup was similar to the Roudabush farm, just slightly larger. However, in this case the pastures were about 100 yards from the barn. The area between the grassed strips and barn was used as an exercise lot. The grassed lots had excellent grass cover in mid-November, despite the fact that these dairymen put their cows on these lots approximately 325 days a year.

According to Swisher, the benefits of the system for the cows include:

- Cleaner udders (reduced milking time).
- Fewer cases of mastitis and reproductive infections.
- Grassed lots were 8 degrees cooler in summer than bare lots.
- Cleaner-looking pasture and farmstead area.
- Less time needed to get cows up for milking.
- Cows exhibit heat better on grass than on concrete.

The main reason for developing this system was water quality improvement. The Roudabush farm achieved a reduction in soil loss from 72 tons/acre/year on the bare lot to .42 tons/acre/year on the grassed lot. In addition, the grass growth utilizes additional nutrients and prevents them from leaching into groundwater. In Virginia, cost sharing is available for the costs and labor involved in establishing this practice.

Win Phillips, nutrient management specialist with the Virginia Department of Conservation and Recreation, explained the tax credit program in Virginia. Virginia provides a state income tax credit of up to $3,750 for farmers with nutrient management plans who purchase manure spreaders provided the spreaders have a litter pan, top beater, and a drive slow down kit. These features enable farmers to spread poultry manure at rates as low as three tons per acre. To encourage the use of conservation tillage, a tax credit of $2,500 is available for the purchase of no-till drills and planters.

The final stop on the tour was the Wampler Turkey farm, where the group received a firsthand look at dead bird composting. This low-cost dead bird disposal system saved this farm nearly $10,000 per year in energy savings over incineration.

Wampler also had a stacking shed which was used for storage and composting of poultry manure. This stacking shed is one of 120 manure sheds that was cost shared through the Chesapeake Bay Program.

Pay Extra Attention To Swine During Winter

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Because winter weather can increase the likelihood of several hog health problems, swine producers need to keep their animals warm and well, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Respiratory problems, viral infections, and feed inefficiency are just a few of the concerns producers should be aware of during winter," said Dr. Kenneth Kephart, associate professor of animal science. "Keeping a careful eye on your animals will help them stay healthy and help keep your operation profitable."

Avoiding swine respiratory problems can be a major challenge for producers during winter, particularly when pigs are housed indoors. Poor air movement in confined spaces can cause or aggravate ailments such as chronic pneumonia and rhinitis.

"During winter, producers tend not to move much air through their facilities," Kephart said. "They slow ventilation fans down to retain warmth and minimize heating bills. But when air quality suffers the pigs suffer, too. The object is to find a happy medium between moving enough air and not using too much heat."

Observation will tell you if too little air is moving through your facility. "If you're moving a lot of air and the pigs are huddled together, they're too cold," Kephart said. "On the other hand, if your eyes water when you walk in, there's too much ammonia in the air — and not enough fresh air."

Sweating walls also can reveal inadequate ventilation. "If you see an insulated wall sweating, it's an excellent sign you're not moving enough air," Kephart said. "It's natural for windows to sweat, but not for insulated walls or ceilings."

The risk of viral infections also increases during winter. "Viruses survive better in cold temperatures, so producers must be extremely vigilant about biosecurity," Kephart said. "During the winter months, your chances of spreading transmissible gastroenteritis, pseudorabies, and other viral diseases increases."

"When you go to a packing plant or marketing area, wear disposable overalls and boots, or make sure you launder that clothing before entering your own facility," he said. "You'll be in contact with pigs from many different places, and you must assume that every possible disease will be there. Don't wear any clothing you've worn into a packing plant or marketing area into your barns unless they've been laundered."

If your herd stays outside, be sure to keep them as warm as possible or their feed efficiency will be severely inhibited. "When pigs are outside in cold weather, they need more feed than normal because they burn more energy just to keep warm," Kephart said. "The amount of feed a pig needs to stay in good flesh doesn't have to get out of hand unless you're not using enough bedding and the pigs aren't warm enough when they sleep."

Winter is an ideal time to feed a high-fiber diet. "When an animal digests fiber, the digestion process generates heat," Kephart said. Providing plenty of bedding material also will help, as will building a hovel. "If the weather is extremely cold, consider building an area to trap heat down at the pig's level," Kephart said. Place straw bales on planks or plywood, creating a miniature environment that will keep the pigs warmer.

Normal feed conversion is roughly three pounds of feed to each pound of gain, Kephart said. "But when pigs are so cold they shiver, the feed conversion rate triples — it takes nearly 10 pounds of feed for each pound of gain. You can't make money under those conditions, no matter how strong the market is."

Observing the outside facility when the pigs are sleeping can reveal whether your animals are too cold. "Watch the pigs as they sleep," Kephart said. "If they're spread out on their sides and quiet, they're comfortable. But if they're fussing and fighting with each other for a place to sleep, and if pigs are crawling on top of each other and piling up, they're far too cold, which means they're burning up a lot of feed."

Harold Roller, ag extension agent in Rockingham County, Virginia, explained the Rockingham County poultry manure ordinance. The ordinance outlined minimum setbacks, acreage requirements, and nutrient management requirements for new and existing poultry facilities.

Farmers in the Pequea-Mill Creek area of central Lancaster county who may be interested in trying the rotational lot management system can contact Jeff Stoltzfus or Frank Lucas at the Pequea-Mill Creek Project, 311B Airport Dr., P. O. Box 211, Smoketown, PA 17576-0211, (717) 396-9423.

Indiana Senator Urges Quick Action

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Richard Lugar urged USDA officials to expedite disaster payments to farmers hurt by drought this year, proposing that the two month sign-up period for disaster relief — possibly commencing as late as February 1992 — be shortened to one month.

Lugar from Indiana proposed a shorter sign-up period to speed disaster assistance payments to farmers.

"We ought to get 1991 disaster payments out to eligible farmers as fast as we possibly can, consistent with running a sound program," Lugar said in a letter to USDA Secretary Ed Madigan.

"It seems to me that one month might be sufficient for collecting (disaster assistance) applications. This way, farmers could receive payments a month sooner than would otherwise be the case."

"I understand that there is some minimum amount of time required to implement the disaster payment program if it is to be done in a responsible manner. But I cannot stress enough my own view that we ought to minimize the waiting time for farmers," Lugar said.

The Congress passed and President Bush signed into law a $1 billion drought disaster package to help those farmers who lost more than 35 percent of a crop this summer, according to Lugar, who proposed the assistance in September.

Payments will be made based on the extent of damage to a crop. Farmers with crop insurance would qualify for payments on losses above a threshold deductible of 35 percent of the average yield. Those without insurance would qualify if they lost more than 40 percent of a crop.

For example, an insured corn farmer would receive $1.13 for every bushel lost to drought above 35 percent of his expected crop, which is based on historical averages for yield in the county.

Berks 4-H Livestock Members Honored

CONNIE LEINBACH
(Berks Co. Correspondent)
KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Berks County 4-H livestock club members were honored recently at the annual banquet in the Kutztown Grange Hall, sponsored by Penn State extension.

Amy Eshelman of Shillington, a senior at Gov. Mifflin High School, was the big winner, capturing the beef club senior project book and senior blueform, and the sheep club senior blueform.

Debbie Dietrich, 4-H extension agent, said she awarded Amy the project book award because of the thoroughness and accuracy of the financial records.

"I also look for how interesting their stories are and not just a listing of their winnings," she said. What a youth learns in 4-H, such as working together, counts more than how many honors they won, Dietrich said.

She noted that Jason and Melissa Leiby of Leesport also had interesting project books.

Eshelman also was recently named the Pa. Sheep and Wool Queen.

Other winners from the Berks County Beef Club were Jason

Leiby for his intermediate project book; his sister, Melissa, for her junior project book; and Jason Manwiller for his intermediate blue form.

In the Berks County Sheep Club, Megan Perry won the senior project book, Theresa Anspach won the intermediate project book, and Katie Ramsay won the junior project book.

In the swine club, Debbie Beck won the senior project book, Leon Hunter won the intermediate project book, and Carrie Cooper won the junior project book.

1991 NAE4-HA National Conference

Judith S. Baillere, Gloucester County 4-H agent, returned recently from the National Conference of Extension 4-H Youth Agents in Phoenix.

Judy was among 1,000 youth professionals from throughout the United States and Canada who attended the five-day meeting. She said sharing problems and solutions was a major benefit of the conference.

About 90 seminars and research sessions were offered, covering such topics as youth development, educational design, community management, strategic planning, volunteers, and diversity.

Judy said she found sessions on School Age Child Care particularly helpful. "It is this kind of up to the minute information which equips 4-H to help meet the needs of the ever growing number of 'latchkey' children."

Participants also heard a number of nationally known experts address youth development issues. Educator and psychologist H. Stephen Glenn outlined strategies for raising children for success. Donna Alvarado, president of Quest International, described curriculum and teaching methods that promote self-esteem and positive youth development. Albert Yates, president of Colorado State University, addressed the importance of diversity in Extension youth programming, while Scott Momaday, a Kiowa Indian and University of Arizona English professor, stressed the value of honoring heritage through oral tradition.

MILK. IT'S FITNESS YOU CAN DRINK.

Hey! Folks

If your cows are slipping and falling, it ain't my fault because I have a machine called a Scabblar that will fix that concrete so your cows won't keep slipping all the time.

We've got service all around this section of the country, and I have a fellow just jumping to do your job mighty fast.

And that ain't all, our prices are right reasonable, and if you're a tightwad we'll let you do the job yourself if you've got over 500 square feet. It can save you right smart a money.

So call me on my nickel at 800-692-0123. If I'm not by the phone, some real live person will take your number, and I'll try to get back to you real soon. Usually somebody is awake in this outfit, so you just call any time day or night. But, please mind the Lord, and don't call on Sunday.

Just one more thing. We fellows make our living doing this kind of work, and we've got children to feed and bills. That's our side of it, but you've got such things too. A lot of people tell us that this Scabbling saves a whole lot more than it costs. So go ahead and do it. It'll put shoes on everybody's feet.

Deck The Halls With Thoughts Of Safety

NEWARK, Del. — Make the holidays safe for children as you decorate for the season. Many of the traditional trimmings, from candles and the Christmas tree to gift wrap and mistletoe, can pose serious health threats to children. "With all the hustle of the holidays, people sometimes forget to take proper safety precautions," says Ron Jester, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension safety specialist. "But injury is the number-one cause of death in children, and some decorations can be dangerous to children." As this year's Delaware Safe Kids Coalition coordinator, Jester offers the following suggestions for a safe and healthy holiday.

Jester says when buying a natural Christmas tree, look for a fresh tree, which is less likely to catch on fire. Signs that the tree is fresh are a strong scent of pine, branches that bend without snapping and needles that are hard to pull off the branch.

In the house, keep the tree away from heat sources such as fireplaces and radiators, and dispose of the tree as soon as possible after the holidays. A fire-resistant artificial tree is an alternative which allows homeowners to keep a tree up longer.

"Decorate the tree using only UL-approved lights and cords, and inspect the lights first for exposed or frayed wires, loose connections or broken sockets," Jester warns. "Don't overload extensions with lights. Use no more than three strings of lights on one extension cord."

Decorate the tree with small children in mind. Do not put breakable ornaments, ornaments with detachable parts, or ones that look like food or candy on the lower branches within their reach.

Burning candles pose a fire hazard if they are left unattended or are placed too near draperies or anything flammable. Do not leave the room while candles are burning. And teach toddlers to keep a safe distance from the flame.

Keep poisonous plants out of children's reach. Poisonous holiday plants include amaryllis, boxwood, castor bean, Christmas cherry, Christmas rose, crown of thorns, English and American ivy and mountain laurel. The berries from holly and mistletoe are also poisonous if ingested.

"Don't overlook something as simple as the colored wrapping paper on gifts," Jester warns. "It may contain lead and other elements which are toxic if eaten by small children. Dispose of wrappings immediately."

HAPPENINGS

Cedar Crest FFA Attends Area Leadership Conference

Cedar Crest FFA recently attended the 1991 area FFA Leadership Training Conference at the Cedar Crest Middle School. The purpose of this event was to familiarize FFA officers and members with their duties and responsibilities as chapter officers. The conference also included sessions on developing leadership skills.

The group was greeted by Matt Hoover, county FFA president. As part of the program, Dale Heagy, state FFA chaplain, spoke to the group about becoming involved in the FFA.

First-year FFA members from Lebanon and Schuylkill counties competed in a quiz contest. Participating students had to answer questions about the FFA.

Robert Carroll and Paul Lane competed for Cedar Crest, Robert Carroll placed 8th and Paul Lane placed 9th.

Other Cedar Crest participants were Jason Krall, Scott Nolt, Danny Atkins, Nate Seyfert, Bill Binner, Matt Sensenig, Travis Barr, and Kris Shultz.

Thirty-four FFA members from across Pennsylvania competed at National FFA competition in various contests. These contests were held at the Eastern States Exposition located in West Springfield, Mass., on Sept. 14, 1991. The students who competed won the right to advance to national competition by winning in the state contests held at Penn State University last June. Students competing at Eastern States Exposition represented FFA members from 14 northeast states.

Tom Zartman, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Zartman, Sr., 820 Hilltop Rd., Ephrata, placed ninth in safe tractor operation.

GEHL

Roller Mixer The Industry Leader

We've combined the proven features and advantages of our Mix-All with a commercial grade roller mill to give you the best portable roller mill feed maker available today.

A Gehl roller mill produces a coarse feed of precise particle size with reduced dust and "flour" in the feed. That means optimum gain for your livestock.

A heavy-duty, commercial grade roller mill features deep grooved rolls that uniformly reduce grain to a pre-determined particle size for maximum nutritional value.

Gehl Mix-All®: the "can do" machine!

On-farm feedmaking has never been better. Or more worry-free. In fact, Gehl Mix-All® portable grinder-mixers are truly "can do" machines. Because they fit into any feedmaking operation; uniformly grind and mix ingredients for a higher quality feed; and save work and time with efficient hydraulics. Choice of 100 or 135 bu. capacity models.

Come in today and see what a Mix-All® "can do" for you!

Gehl TMR Mixer Feeders Are #1

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action - Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes - From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities.
- Three Styles - Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

Christmas Thoughts

*Let us keep Christmas, its meaning never ends
...the time of year to wish happiness and good will to friends and loved ones, near and far...the time to share the joys of the past and the hopes of the future, and to remember all we have to be thankful for. If we can do this for a day, why not forever?
Let us keep the true spirit of Christmas. Today,

TRADITIONAL TURKEY DINNER IN LESS THAN THE TRADITIONAL TIME

Poultry Products
Extension Aide Dept. of Food Science

Thanksgiving is past, but Christmas is only days away. And of the holiday meals enjoyed throughout the year, those of Thanksgiving and Christmas share the most in common.

Turkey, with all the fixings, is the common denominator between these meals for many families. However, today's families are busier than ever, and the thought of "slaving away" in a hot kitchen all day, to produce a succulent, golden-brown bird, may be a bit intimidating to some.

Not to fear, though. There are many easy-to-prepare alternatives which will allow you to present a tantalizing turkey feast to your family and friends, even with only a "shoe-string" of time.

You can buy a turkey frozen with a seasoned stuffing already in the body cavity. The stuffing is prepared under sanitary conditions and is ideal for those who don't have the time to prepare one. You roast a pre-stuffed turkey in its frozen state with little advance preparation.

Of course, you pay more for this convenience in two ways — the initial higher cost per pound and the cost of the extra energy required for the longer cooking of the frozen bird. It must be stressed, however, that you must not try to save energy by defrosting the pre-stuffed bird before roasting. Slow thawing can cause bacterial growth in the stuffing and on the bird that may lead to food poisoning.

Besides the ready-stuffed birds, you can select self-basting birds, ones with built-in thermometers, boil-in-the-bag turkey slices, or even boneless turkey rolls and roasts.

In the self-basting turkey, an oil-type product (such as corn oil, margarine, or butter), is added to the turkey meat to add succulence and greater flavor. In the self-basting process, the mixture bastes the meat and skin surface, leaving you free to enjoy your guests while the turkey bastes itself to a golden brown.

If you prefer just breast or just dark meat or want additional meat to go along with the whole bird, you can buy turkey parts in the frozen meat section of your grocery store. Because of the added labor costs and meat content, turkey parts cost a little more than whole turkeys. Since there is little or no waste in turkey parts, they are ideal for the small family.

The boned and tied turkey consists of light and dark meat surrounded by a natural skin cover. The advantages of this are shorter cooking time and no bones or trimmable waste. Because of the labor involved in separating the meat from the bone and the processing necessary to put the product into final form, boned and tied turkeys also cost more per pound than whole turkeys.

Another no-bones, no-waste, faster-cooking product is the turkey pan roast. The meat consists of a light and dark meat portion which has been mixed with binding materials and formed in an aluminum pan with a natural skin covering on top. You may also like the idea of a boneless turkey ham — low-fat, no waste, a taste nearly identical to that of pork ham, and able to be roasted with little advance preparation.

Even with all these mouth-watering, labor-saving turkey options, some will still opt for a fresh, unfrozen bird; and of course, there are those special touches and "secret recipes" that only your time and energy can provide.

Expect to pay a premium price for fresh, unfrozen turkeys since they must be processed during the rush period immediately before a holiday. Fresh turkey can be safely held in the coldest part of your refrigerator for about one week after slaughter. Be sure any wrappings are loose enough to allow some air circulation.

Before cooking, wash a fresh-killed bird thoroughly and check carefully for any off-odors. The "sniff test" is a very reliable indicator of fresh quality with raw poultry — if it smells bad, it is bad — don't take a chance and cook it anyway.

Since frozen turkeys have been rapidly frozen immediately after slaughter, they retain their quality well during storage. Taste tests have repeatedly shown little or no flavor difference between fresh and properly defrosted frozen birds. In addition, nutritional value varies little between the two.

Remember, though, never thaw a frozen turkey (or any meat) at room temperature; thaw it in the refrigerator or in cold water that is changed frequently.

This holiday season, enjoy yourselves! You can still bring the traditional flavor and fun of a turkey dinner to your table whether you have two days or two hours to devote to the task.

Penn State Releases Corn Trial Results

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension has announced the release of the 1991 Pennsylvania commercial hybrid corn test reports.

The free publications contain data on grain yield, moisture, and disease rating for dozens of brands sold in Pennsylvania. Farmers can use the information as they make seed-buying decisions for the 1992 growing season.

"These reports should be the backbone of every corn grower's hybrid selection program," said Dr. Greg Roth, assistant professor of agronomy in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The corn performance reports help growers increase yields by providing data on which hybrid is best suited for local conditions. A separate report is available for each of four Pennsylvania maturity zones.

To receive copies of the reports, call your county office of Penn State Cooperative Extension or contact the Publication Distribution Center, The Pennsylvania State University, 112 Ag Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 865-6713.

For use in both conservation and conventional tillage, the White 230 field cultivator is designed to reduce chemical usage and maximize chemical performance. The evolutionary design features a self-leveling hitch which allows the front and rear shanks to maintain consistent depth.

Cultivator Has Self-Leveling Hitch

COLDWATER, Ohio — White-New Idea Farm Equipment Co. announces the introduction of the White 230 field cultivator for use in both conservation and conventional tillage applications.

Designed to reduce chemical usage and maximize chemical performance, the new White 230 fills the vital secondary tillage tool role in weed control programs utilizing reduced chemical applications. The evolutionary design features a self-leveling hitch which allows the front and rear shanks to maintain consistent depth.

Other standard features include heavy-duty 4"x4" tubing and five bar design which keeps shanks 28" apart for use in fields with heavy crop residue. Depth is precisely controlled in 1/8" increments.

Both industry-standard "C" shanks and high-speed "S" tines are available.

Reproductive Health, Feeding Go Hand In Hand

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The care a cow gets the week that she freshens determines the fertility of the animal two months later.

So if farmers want to avoid possible reproductive problems, they must consider a host of factors, from the vital nutritional needs from calving to drying off, and keeping careful track of the cow's cycling with proper recordkeeping.

And a cow's reproductive problems may stem from a variety of other problems that veterinarians have to look out for to paint the complete cow health picture, according to Dr. William J. Prokop, DVM, who spoke at the fifth annual Agri-Basics dairy meeting here last week.

Agri-Basics hosted 260 guests at its educational meeting to help farmers in dairy farm management, according to Daryl Schafer, Agri-Basics marketing coordinator.

In the past, dairy farmers viewed veterinarians as an "unwelcome expense, a liability, or a necessary evil," said Prokop. "We were there when you had a problem, and that was all."

"But we want to get away from that," he said. Veterinarians had to fit their practice in line with the "herd health era," which stresses

Dr. Paul Chandler, Chandler and Associates, spoke about managing heifer programs, dry cow management, and bypass protein requirements at the Agri-Basics dairy meeting.

Dr. William J. Prokop, DVM, spoke about dairy reproductive programs at the Agri-Basics dairy meeting.

Barnes Becomes Loan Officer

W. Jay Chamberlin, branch manager, announced the recent appointment.

Barnes is a graduate of Westminster College with a degree in mathematics. Before coming to PennWest Farm Credit she served as a program assistant for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Mercer.

She was raised on her family's McDowell farms near Jackson Center and has a 10-year 4-H background. Her husband is Philip Barnes.

She will serve clients in the

Hoffman Seeds Appoints Dealers

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds, Inc., announces the appointment of Glen Engle of Silver Maple Farms, Cochranville, as a Hoffman dealer for Chester Co.

The company also announces the appointments of Mark Hoch of Oley as a Hoffman sales representative for Berks Co. and Carl Nestleroth of Manheim as a Hoffman sales representative for Lancaster Co.

The representatives will handle the full line of Hoffman products, including Funk G brand hybrids.

They were all appointed to the positions because of their knowledge of local growing conditions.

Engle has lived in the community for 35 years and has 20 years of farming experience. He is a member of the Octorara Young Farmers Association and the Pennsylvania Farmers Association (PFA).

Hoch has lived in the community for 40 years and has 22 years of farming experience. Hoch is also a member of PFA.

Nestleroth has lived in the community for 74 years and has 50 years of farming experience.

Dr. Norman St. Pierre, Renaissance Nutrition, spoke about the importance of calf and heifer programs at the Agri-Basics dairy meeting last week.

preventive medicine programs to "prevent some of the problems that were costing you money," he said. And reproduction is often the number one problem the vet is called for.

But, as the saying goes, the best cure is prevention — and that includes looking closely at nutrition and using preventive medicine to stop or at least stem some problems dairy farmers may encounter with their cows.

"As trained observers, we have to look beyond the reproductive tract, even though we may be called in for what is a reproductive problem," said Prokop. When the vet is called in, however, only 20 percent of the time can they provide answers — often enough, the vet can't obtain an answer, despite some of the advances in veterinary science.

Often, using farm records may be the best way to pinpoint a problem. And that, according to Prokop, is through heat detection.

Heat detection is still the number one cause of infertility on most farms, he said. Breeders must keep adequate records to ensure that they know when a cow cycles

Reproductive Health

(usually in a 18-24 day window). Once a cow establishes a cycle, the farmer must carefully track that constant cycle on a consistent basis. Calving intervals should be 12-13 months, and breeding dates, 75 days or less.

"A complete herd health program has to go beyond reproduction and mastitis and infectious agents. We can vaccinate. We can deworm the cow. We can evaluate feet and legs.

"But proper nutrient impacts on almost all of the parameters that we deal with as veterinarians," he said. "And we also have to evaluate the management — in other words, the environment. You, as the manager of the farm, impact on the effectiveness of a program that a veterinarian may be trying to put into place."

The farmer must follow good nutrient management from start to finish. Because if a cycling heifer starts out with milk fever, for instance, she has a 2.8 greater chance of having problems in calving difficulty, a one and a half times greater chance of having uterine infections, and eight-fold possibility of developing mastitis, and a nine times greater chance of developing ketosis later on.

"The problems in dairy cows, especially reproductively, are like dominoes — one falls into another and on it goes," said Prokop. "Too often, the focus is on one problem and we try to fit the solutions into a bottle. What it really is is management."

Prokop said the veterinary industry, nutritionists, and other agribusiness specialties must learn to work together to keep dairy farming a viable industry.

"Today's dairy farmer can't afford anything less, because economic times are the toughest they've been in the last eight years. And in a way, that's terrific, because it's going to make all of us much better at what we're doing. We're going to have to be, in order to survive."

Care and consideration must go into calf care from the moment of birth, because the calf has special needs. Dr. Norman St. Pierre, Renaissance Nutrition, spoke about the importance of obtaining the right feed constituents for a calf.

Dr. Paul Chandler, Chandler and Associates, spoke about the need to start a heifer feeding and management program "at the day of birth and stay on it," he said. Farmers must set weight goals and maintain consistency of feeding in their program. The importance of feed at the heifer stage, including the benefits of high quality, degradable, high-bypass protein is essential. Chandler also spoke about the special prep-partum anionic shift program to improve body condition and overall cow health.

Jesse Weaver, Agri-Basics Soil Service, described the soil testing and crop scouting services offered by Agri-Basics.

Gehl Co. Opens Facility

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Gehl Company employees and their families joined with members of the Future Farmers of America (FFA) to commemorate the completion of Gehl Agriculture's new manufacturing facility and the production of the first Scavenger® II manure spreader in the new facility.

Just a year after the official ground breaking ceremony, production of agricultural equipment is under way at the company's 170,000 square foot world class manufacturing facility in the South Lebanon Industrial Park. The November 23 open house for Gehl employees and families recognized the efforts of the current staff to make this transition.

At the event, representatives from the Lebanon staff, Gehl's headquarters, and the Cedar Crest FFA cut a ribbon surrounding the first Scavenger® II spreader built in the new facility. Tours of the production floor followed the flow of materials in the manufacturing process. Production will be added gradually to this facility throughout 1992. Agricultural equipment that will be produced at the facility was on display.

Cedar Crest FFA hosted a booth showing their involvement in the future of agriculture. A Gehl Company photo history and time line was on display in the facility's museum.

"The cooperative efforts of private industry, local and state government have resulted in great benefits to the Lebanon community and surrounding area," said Gary Blinka, vice president and general manager, Gehl Agriculture. "Our new facility demonstrates Gehl Company's commitment to our current work force and the future of agriculture, as well as to the people of Lebanon County and the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. We are proud to be a part of this community."

Acclaim was developed to achieve maximum stand life and production of premium quality clover forage in straight stands and mixtures. The variety has been selected for vigor and stand persistence, achieving high scores for percent of stand in state trials after the first harvest year.

It has been screened for resistance to northern and southern anthracnose, as well as powdery mildew. Acclaim is similar in flowering date to Arlington. Contact Seedway, Inc., 55 Willow Springs Circle, York, PA 17402, (800) 836-3720 for more information.

Pa. Dairy Sets Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy farmers will have an opportunity to view dairy promotion programs firsthand at the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's (PDPP) fourth annual meeting.

The meeting is scheduled for Monday, January 27, 1992, at 10:30 a.m. at the Atherton Hilton Hotel in State College, Pennsylvania. The meeting includes a review of the PDPP's 1992 programs as well as a special presentation by Kent Tekulve, former Pittsburgh Pirate and Philadelphia Phillies relief pitcher.

"We selected Kent to be our speaker because he is very motivational in nature and has come to understand the challenges faced by Pennsylvania's dairy farmers," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Tekulve is well known across the state as a baseball legend, but his insight into career choices and job conviction will be uplifting to those who attend our meeting."

Currently a marketing specialist with the Pittsburgh Pirates, Tekulve established Major League relief records for most relief appearances and most innings pitched in relief during his baseball career. He also established a Pirate club record for most career saves, with 158 saves during the period 1969-1985. A 19-year baseball professional, Tekulve set a record in the 1979 World Series with three saves. The Pirates defeated the Baltimore Orioles in that series.

Tekulve will follow a presentation by PDPP staff and others. They will present a synopsis of the PDPP's 1991 advertising programs, sports promotions, consumer promotions, communications activities, and nutrition education programs. This presentation will also include a forward look at new 1992 programs and advertising campaigns conducted by the PDPP.

Prior to the annual meeting program, agencies that receive support from the PDPP will be on hand with displays and other materials about their activities. These include the PDPP's promotion partners, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council and Mid East United Dairy Industry Association/F.O. 36 Advertising Agency, as well as the Dairy Council units in Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program, and others.

During the afternoon of January 27, meeting participants will be able to go on several tours of some Penn State College of Agriculture facilities. These include the Penn State Creamery, the Milk Quality Testing Laboratory of Dr. Sidney Barnard, and the new Dairy and Animal Science Research Building.

Reservations are required. All dairy producers can make reservations by calling (717) 787-6903.

PFA Asks PMMB To Help Boost Milk Prices

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) took the first step toward requesting a milk price increase for dairymen coping with the effects of the 1991 drought.

PFA has asked the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) to conduct a hearing in the near future to consider the need to boost milk prices. PFA made the request during PMMB's regularly scheduled meeting last week at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture headquarters in Harrisburg.

At an informational meeting of the PMMB last August to discuss drought conditions, PFA testified that additional time was necessary before the full impact of the drought on crop and forage harvests was known.

Since then PFA has conducted a survey of a representative sample of its dairy members to find out how much their purchased feed costs are expected to increase from January through May, 1992 when feed shortages, if any, would most likely develop.

"Now we have a good idea of how hard the drought has hit Pennsylvania dairymen," said PFA dairy specialist Mel Eckhaus. "Our survey shows that although not every dairy farmer has a problem, there are a significant number of dairymen facing large enough shortages to warrant something being done to help them on a statewide basis."

If PFA's request for a hearing is granted, PFA will ask for a milk price increase in addition to the $1.05/cwt. Class I over-order price currently in place.

"Our survey data is still being analyzed to determine how large an increase will be needed. Market conditions will also need to be considered," Eckhaus said. "Right now we want to get a hearing scheduled. If our request is approved, we hope to get a hearing date as soon as possible after the first of the year. It's crucial that dairymen get help as soon as possible."

Jacques Releases Nematode-Resistant Soy Variety

PRESCOTT, Wis. — The newest weapon in the continuing fight against the yield-robbing soybean cyst nematode (SCN) is now available from Jacques Seed Company.

Jacques 380C is a Group III variety that combines resistance to SCN Races 3 and 4 with moderately high phytophthora field tolerance and very good yield potential.

"Jacques 380C's late Group III maturity makes it widely adapted to some major soybean-producing areas," said Jacques soybean breeder Tim Foley. "It also stands out for its very good shatter resistance."

The variety is rated very good for seedling vigor as well, and develops a medium-height, medium-canopy plant with very good standability. J-380C also has excellent row-width versatility and drought stress tolerance.

Up to now, incorporation of SCN-resistance into previously susceptible varieties has resulted in a 5 percent to 10 percent reduction in yield potential compared to the susceptible variety, Foley said. However, even though yield data are preliminary, Foley reports that Jacques 380C appears to be a very competitive yielder compared to susceptible varieties of the same maturity grown in non-infested fields.

University of Kentucky

research has shown that when cyst numbers are between 50 and 100 per pint of soil sample, yield decreases of 15 percent to 25 percent can occur. As cyst numbers increase to between 200 and 300 per sample, yield losses can reach 50 percent.

The only way to stay ahead of the pest, believes Dr. Greg Tylka, Iowa State University nematologist, is to get a soil analysis now, whether you've spotted visual symptoms or not.

"If the farmer doesn't have the cyst nematode, great! If the numbers are low, he can establish a management program to keep them under control. If the numbers are moderate to high, he's probably going to have to quit producing soybeans in those fields for awhile."

Since SCN was first found in North Carolina in 1954, it has been steadily pushing north and west. Thought originally to be a southern producer's problem, it has now been identified in more than 22 soybean-producing states and new areas are being reported every year. The nematode has been confirmed in 49 of Iowa's 99 counties, for example, and also in areas of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

SCN is a microscopic roundworm varying in length from 1/125" to 1/5". It feeds on the roots of the soybean plant, reducing its ability to absorb water and nutrients, thus lowering yield. Pregnant female cyst nematodes are visible as white cysts on the roots at the early flowering stage in late June or early July. Sixteen known races or types of the pest have been identified.

Visual symptoms include plant stunting and yellowing. Affected plants are usually found in circular patches or oblong areas that follow the direction of tillage.

Plants that are already under stress due to drought or other diseases are also more prone to SCN damage. A management program that keeps plants as healthy as possible will minimize yield loss. "I liken it to the human body," said Tylka. "If you're already weak from a cold, the effects you'll feel from some other disease are much worse."

"If the soybean plant is suffering from the effects of drought or iron deficiency chlorosis, for example, the effect of the nematode is much worse."

Once nematodes are identified as a problem, there are several management techniques farmers can utilize to keep yield loss as low as possible, said Dr. Dennis Byron, Jacques director of soybean research.

"The most effective method of controlling the pest, once it's present, is crop rotation," said Byron. "A four-year plan that has worked well is to plant a SCN-resistant soybean variety the first year, corn the next year, a susceptible soybean variety the third year, and then back to corn the fourth year. Three out of the four years you are growing a crop that is a non-host."

It's good advice, cautions Byron, to have another soil sample analyzed to determine the remaining levels of SCN before planting the susceptible variety in the third year.

Unfortunately, farmers can't avoid SCN damage by planting just one resistant variety, said Byron.

"Research has shown the nematode can quickly shift from one race to another. So if you plant the same resistant variety year after year, it can actually promote increased infestation of another nematode race that can attack the resistant variety."

There can also be advantages to planting a resistant/susceptible soybean seed blend, said Byron. Under SCN pressure, the grower can expect a higher level of overall field yield. The high-yielding susceptible component of the blend will maintain high yields in non-infested and low cyst infested areas of the field, while the resistant component will contribute reasonable yields in moderately infested areas.

The Jacques Seed Company blend, 440C Brand, is an early-to-mid Group IV containing the Races 3 and 4 resistant component. 440C shows improved yield performance under low-to-moderate SCN pressure. It produces medium-height plants that display very good lodging resistance and very good shatter resistance.

Even if you think you don't have a SCN problem, the only way to tell for sure is to have a soil analysis done, said Tylka. And regardless of where you farm, the geographic expansion the pest has shown in the last 30 years means that if you grow soybeans, you'll eventually have to make room in your management program for fighting soybean cyst nematode.

Pointsettia Update

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — "Poinsettia lovers can shop with confidence this holiday season," says Tim Malone, executive director of the newly-formed Poinsettia Growers Association. "Rumors of any infestation problems in poinsettias are simply untrue."

The vegetable and fruit industry in California has received national attention focused on their whitefly problem. Unfortunately, the insect in question, called the Poinsettia Whitefly by the press, is really the Sweetpotato Whitefly, according to Penn State entomologist Paul Heller.

This year, poinsettias are as least as pest free as in the past. Also, poinsettias are not poisonous, which is another erroneous rumor.

GATT Reports Worry Soy Farmers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — U.S. soybean farmers are becoming increasingly alarmed that U.S. agriculture — and soybean farmers in particular — will be the losers in the GATT negotiating process.

"We are very concerned by reports out of Geneva that the U.S. is pursuing an agreement at any cost," said American Soybean Association President Gary Riedel. "The GATT process must result in an agreement that's good for U.S. soybean farmers. Any agreement must not include EC-supported 'rebalancing', and must achieve meaningful reductions in EC internal oilseed subsidies to be acceptable to soybean farmers."

Riedel says soybean farmers are especially concerned about the European Community's continuing demands for "rebalancing," which would allow the EC to impose import barriers for soybeans, soybean meal, and corn gluten, while lowering barriers for other commodities.

"We heard rumors last weekend that the U.S. was softening its stance on rebalancing," Riedel said. "After repeated statements from the administration that rebalancing would be unacceptable, soybean farmers were very distressed to hear these reports. We can only hope that the rumors are not true."

He noted that the Congress expressed its strong opposition to rebalancing in the 1990 Farm Bill.

Riedel said the failure of the GATT process to effectively resolve the U.S.-EC dispute over the EC's GATT-illegal oilseeds program "calls into question" the entire process. "After four years and a GATT dispute settlement panel ruling against the EC oilseeds program, the EC has yet to take significant action to reform their program. If we can't enforce the agreements already in place, what is the purpose of pursuing a new agreement?"

"U.S. soybean farmers have been supportive of the Uruguay Round of GATT negotiations and worked aggressively for fast track authority to enable the negotiations to move forward," Riedel said. "However, unless the U.S.

negotiators come home with an agreement that benefits U.S. soybean farmers, we will be forced not only to withdraw our support, but to work aggressively to defeat the agreement."

Ag Letter Looks At Drought

READING (Berks Co.)—Farmers throughout southcentral and southeastern Pennsylvania suffered huge crop losses in the summer of 1991, one of the driest in recent memory.

Along with everybody else, farmers were wondering what that drought will mean. Is it part of a normal weather pattern? Was it a freakish occurrence? Will the local climate become hotter and more arid?

According to Penn State meteorologist Paul Knight, the summer of 1992 is almost certain to be wetter than the summer just past. Although the 1991 drought was severe, it was well within the normal range of summer weather, Knight reported in the most recent issue of Meridian Bank's Ag Letter.

The Ag Letter is mailed periodically to farmers and agribusinessmen in Meridian's service area. Meridian is one of the largest ag lenders in the Northeast.

In most recent years, according to Knight, the cultivated fields have been covered with lush spring growth. The early growth helps keep the ground cool by reflecting sunlight. In 1991, the fields did not have that early spring cover. The dark-colored earth absorbed sunlight. It heated up and stayed hot, which was why the region suffered through a heat wave as well as a drought.

"What happened this summer was a blocking weather pattern that came into southern and southeastern Pennsylvania and just stayed," Knight said. "It's not likely to happen two years in a row, and it's certainly not going to happen every year. In 1991, the block came in at the worst possible time, early May, when the crops needed rain and cloud cover to germinate and get off to a good start."

Most of us, farmers and non-farmers alike, can't do anything about the weather except hope for the best. But, Paul Clugston, who farms outside Halifax in Dauphin County, has taken a more active course.

Clugston's farm is hilly and has soil types that don't retain water very well. His income derives from the sale of milk from a dairy herd, and chicken from a flock of broilers. Clugston needs his 223 acres of farmland both to produce feed for his cows and to dispose of the manure from the dairy animals and the chickens.

Like most dairymen in the area, Clugston grows corn, alfalfa and some ryegrass for dairy feed. For many years, that's all he grew, but he was constantly worried about dry summers.

Four years ago, he took part of the land he ordinarily would have planted with corn and instead planted sudangrass. Sudangrass is a relative of corn, but it doesn't produce ears and is much more tolerant of drought.

In another Ag Letter article, Clugston said not everybody could benefit from his cropping scheme. It did very well for him this summer, though, because his soil types, combined with the hot, dry weather, were extremely unfavorable for corn production.

Even the sudangrass was hurt somewhat. In a more normal year, Clugston said he would expect to get three cuttings of sudangrass for animal feed. In the summer of 1991 he was able to get only two cuttings.

In addition to its drought resistance, sudangrass removes two to three times as many soil nutrients - nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium - as does a crop of corn. For livestock-intensive farms such as Clugston's, this can be a valuable management tool to help stem the runoff of soil nutrients into nearby streams. It can also help control the leaching of nitrates into groundwater supplies.

State Grange Makes Dairy Nomination

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—A Newport farmer with more than 50 years of dairy experience has been nominated by the Pennsylvania State Grange to serve on the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board.

Robert Gabel, owner-operator of the 250-acre, 100-head dairy farm where he was born and raised, is also being supported by other major farm organizations and dairy cooperatives. He is a 46-year member of Oliver Grange in Perry Co.

If appointed to this three-year term, Gabel will help make decisions and oversee the Board's $80 million yearly budget. The Board's main responsibility is the promotion and advertising of dairy products.

Gabel serves on the Board of Directors for Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., the Pennsylvania Grange Dairy Committee, and the advertising and promotion agency for the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area.

Some of the other organizations which Gabel is a member of include Pennsylvania Beef Council, Pennsylvania Animal Health and Diagnostics Commission, Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations, Perry County Ag Land Preservation Board, and the Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

Gabel has also won several awards and honors, including Master Farmer Award in 1987, Blue and Gold Award from Newport FFA Chapter in May 1990, and a citation for Perry County Farm Family of the Year in 1976.

He and his wife Berneice reside on Barnview Farm in Newport with their two children.

Pa. Turfgrass A Big Deal

Robert Leiby
David Dunbar

Lehigh Co. Agents

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) recently published a survey on Pennsylvania Turfgrass. The study, conducted in 1989, was co-sponsored by PDA and The Pennsylvania Turfgrass Council. Here are some highlights, summarized by Scott Guiser, Bucks County extension agent:

- Pennsylvania had two million acres of turfgrass; 68 percent of this acreage was in home lawns.
- Total turf maintenance expenditures were 1.46 billion dollars. Again, home lawns account for the majority of this amount (77 percent). Golf course expenditures ranked second (seven percent), followed by home lawn care firms (six percent).

- Cemeteries contain 19,170 acres of turf and spent more than 12 million dollars for lawn care.
- Schools maintained 48,330 acres and spent 17 million dollars on turf care.
- Golf courses accounted for more than 70,000 acres, owned equipment valued at more than 150 million dollars and spent more than 105 million dollars on turf maintenance.
- Homeowners spent more than 52 million dollars for gasoline to maintain home lawns.
- Churches spent more than 15 million dollars to maintain turfgrass in 1989.
- More than 15 million rounds of golf were played on Pennsylvania courses in 1989.
- The value of turf maintenance equipment owned by homeowners was $2,478,350,000, an average of $740 per home.

- Seventy-four percent of home lawns had never been artificially watered.
- Sixty-five percent of homeowners regularly removed grass clippings. Fifty-five percent of those that removed clippings disposed of them in the trash; 29 percent composted them.
- Adult males were responsible for 65 percent of home lawn maintenance, adult females 20 percent, children eight percent, and lawn service companies six percent.

U.S. Hog Industry Changes

The U.S. hog industry is being reshaped by changes in both supply and demand. On the demand side, the industry has been recast by health-related concerns, changing lifestyles that call for a more convenient food product, and competition from other meats. On the supply side, technologies in both crop and livestock production have been driving forces.

The combination of developments in demand and technology have led to larger and more specialized hog operations. About 94 percent of the hog inventory is located on less than 100,000 operations, according to USDA's Economic Research Service. Less than 11,000 operations account for 42 percent of the total hog inventory. Buyers of hogs — slaughterhouses, packers and processors — have also greatly reduced their numbers and increased their scale of operations.

For example, in 1990, two-thirds of hogs were slaughtered by about 2.5 percent of all slaughter plants. These 26 plants operated on a large scale, with an average annual slaughter of more than 1.5 million head.

LPI Predicts Cow's Long-Term Success

CLAYTON, Mo. — Canadian dairy researchers and the breeding industry have developed a unique bull-rating scale known as the Lifetime Profitability Index, or LPI.

Introduced in the January genetic evaluation run in 1991, LPI was created to give dairymen and breeders an easy way to choose the best sires.

According to Dr. Jack Dekkers, a dairy specialist at the University of Guelph, Ontario, "LPI is a measuring criterion that puts focus on the most profitable available bulls.

It's an effective initial guideline for selection. Then the producer can make a specific choice from within that group of high-LPI sires."

LPI attempts to rank sires on the average lifetime profit potential of their daughters, based on the two factors that have been shown to have the largest impact on profitability: production and herd life.

LPI is weighted more heavily on production, Dekkers said, because it's the major factor contributing to dairy profits.

But to maximize the lifetime profitability of a cow, she needs to stay in the herd for several years. Even the most productive cows aren't worth much if they last only a couple of lactations. That's why LPI considers potential herd life in determining a cow's eventual worth.

However, since there are no direct measures of herd life, the sire's proofs for certain type traits are incorporated. "Here some assumptions are made in the LPI formula," Dekkers said, "but past research has found a positive relationship between these particular type traits and a cow's longevity."

Current and future research will attempt to determine the importance of type traits more clearly, as well as that of other traits, such as calving ease and milking speed.

LPI considers a cow's final class, feet and legs, mammary system, and capacity — all elements which can affect a cow's ability to stand up to the demands of calving and milking, year after year.

An LPI score of 1,200 or better represents a truly exceptional sire, but even bulls with scores in the 800-1,000 range can be counted on to contribute to the long-term profitability of a herd.

"We want genetic progress to improve longevity, while keeping the emphasis on high production," Dekkers said.

Dairymen looking for sires that combine a profitable balance of good type and production volume can use LPI as an indicator. For more information about the rating system, or Canadian sires in general, interested dairymen or breeders should contact a representative of Semex USA.

Judging Team First In Northeast

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Student Soil Judging Team placed first among five colleges in the Northeast Collegiate Soil Judging Contest at Delaware Valley College in Doylestown, Pa., recently.

The team now qualifies for the National Collegiate Soil Judging Contest to be held at the University of California at Berkeley and Davis in April 1992.

Make Fleas Flee

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When the ancient Chinese wanted to get rid of fleas, they wore a cumbersome trap made of ivory around their necks. Today, better methods exist.

"The best way to rid your home of fleas is to treat both your home and your infected pet at the same time," said Dr. Robert Snetsinger, professor of entomology in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Too often people rely upon only one of these methods and fleas escape extermination."

Fleas are transmitted primarily from contact between animals, though they can be picked up in backyards and other areas where infected animals have spent time.

Fleas prefer animal blood and bite humans only when exceptionally hungry. People usually are bothered by fleas when they return home from vacation or move into a new home or apartment. In both cases, the fleas probably have been deprived of food and are ready to bite whatever comes their way.

Because fleas can survive for six to eight months without eating, new tenants or homeowners should hire a pest control company to inspect for fleas, even when the new home has been unoccupied for a long time.

"Fleas spend only about 10 percent of the time on pets," Snetsinger said. "The rest of the time they live in thick carpets and moist crevices of the home."

"If you know or suspect there are fleas in your home, thoroughly vacuum not only the carpets, but the floors and the corners of each room, to get rid of both the insects and their larvae," he said. "Then dispose of the vacuum bag."

If problems persist, Snetsinger recommends that homeowners hire a pest control company rather than try to treat their home with pesticides themselves. "Most people don't have the experience to treat all the infested areas," he said. "They might use too much pesticide or not apply it in enough places. Children and pets should be kept away from treated areas while the areas are still wet."

Homeowners can treat their pets with flea powders, sprays, or shampoos. Veterinarians can specify which particular insecticides would be most effective for individual pets. These insecticides may cause fleas to bite the pet as they die, so the pet may show some discomfort after being treated.

Animals in the northeastern

United States rarely contract any health problems from fleas beyond skin irritation, said Snetsinger, but repeated treatment and exposure to insecticides in carpet may be dangerous to pets.

Flea bites are relatively harmless to humans, causing itching and slight swelling. But in the 14th century, fleas were associated with bubonic plague, which killed a quarter of Europe's population. Today, isolated, treatable cases of the plague sometimes occur in the southwestern part of the U.S.

GRAZING PASTURE MANAGEMENT

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN NEW ZEALAND DAIRYING

Warren J. Parker
Department Agricultural and Horticultural Systems Management
Massey University
Palmerston U.
New Zealand

The New Zealand dairy industry is based on 2.3 m cows in 14,744 herds. Ninety percent of the 880,000 tons of dairy products produced annually are exported. Almost all of the herds (95 percent) produce milk on a seasonal basis over a 230-250 day lactation. Grazed pasture comprises more than 90 percent of the cows' diet. This weeks article reviews some of the current research and events in

New Zealand dairying.

Since 1985 New Zealand dairy farmers have been paid on the basis of three factors — milkfat, protein, and volume. Volume is discounted because it contributes importantly to transport and manufacturing costs, and protein has increasingly earned more as consumer demand for milkfat (the traditional basis for pricing) has declined. Thus in 1985 the New Zealand Dairy Board (NZDB) payment was in the ratio of 1.64 for fat to 1 for protein. For the 1991-92 season the ratio is 0.60 for fat to 1 for protein and dairymen are being advised that this is likely to decline to 0.1 to 1 over the next 10 years.

New Zealand dairymen and the NZDB are very interested in methods to increase the total solids content of the milk and especially protein. Most of these improvements are expected to be slowly realised through breeding rather than through nutrition, which offers restricted opportunities because of the use of a pasture-only diet for lactating cows.

The emphasis on solids has renewed interest in the Jersey breed, who lost favor during the 1970s to mid-1980s because Friesian cows provided higher returns for calves (for dairy beef) and cull cows (through heavier carcass weights). Results for the first season of a farm system trial comparing Jerseys and Holstein-Friesians at two stocking rates at Ruakura (near Hamilton in the North Island) showed that Jersey cows made more income per acre (see Table). The farmlets were managed so as to have the same amount of pasture at the end of the milking season.

In comparison to Pennsylvania the results indicate — a shorter average lactation (corresponding to seasonal dairying), lower milk yields per cow, but high percentages of solids and more emphasis on income per acre than per cow. Also those of you who have read the past articles on stocking rate will be interested to see the effect of more cows per acre and of the different liveweight of the two breeds.

Cow liveweights are a topic of discussion at present. A researcher has suggested that New Zealand dairymen should be considering smaller cows for pasture production efficiency. Increasing a cow's liveweight from 882 pounds to 992 pounds (small by US standards in either case), requires an additional 375 pounds pasture DM per year for maintenance energy. For a 155 cow herd (about the New Zealand average), this 110 pounds increase in individual cow liveweight equates to an extra 17089 pounds of herd liveweight which is equivalent to the weight of 19 cows and the consumption of an extra 58,433 pounds of pasture DM per year! If this pasture DM was used to produce milk, rather than maintain liveweight, it would generate an extra 33 pounds milkfat/cow with a value of $33.66 (or $5,217 for the 155 cow herd). Extra cows, rather than liveweight, would earn additional income through calf and cull cow sales. The figures are challenging, and raise questions about the need for 1300-1600 pounds cows in Pennsylvania, especially where cows are on a pasture diet.

Dairyfarmers are showing a lot of interest in "focus" farms. This is a relatively new extension program, involving Dairy Companies and New Zealand Dairy Board Consulting Officers. The "focus" farms are located in different districts and are closely monitored (e.g. pasture production, cow condition scores, herd replacement liveweight gains, milk production) to identify where management could be improved or new technology could be adopted to increase profit. The farms are operated by commercial farmers and are managed under the same constraints as the 'real' world (rather than a research environment). The measurement of farm performance has highlighted some interesting factors — low performing farms don't necessarily produce a lot less pasture and often can make significant

Exports Of Pennsylvania Ag Products

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Trade leads from 43 countries were generated by Pennsylvania's exhibit at the ANUGA '91 Trade Show, held Oct. 12-17 in Cologne, Germany. ANUGA is the largest food and beverage show in the world.

The Pennsylvania exhibit was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's International Trade Division. The Division was established in 1979 to promote the sale of commonwealth products internationally.

"We're delighted with the success that we achieved with our exhibit at the ANUGA show this year," Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff said. "In these lean economic times for our country, it's encouraging to see that there is a growing worldwide market for Pennsylvania agricultural products," Wolff added.

A total of 193 leads were generated by 43 countries around the globe, from South America to Africa and the Far East.

Eight Pennsylvania firms were represented at the Show. Peter Witmer, director of the International Trade Division, said the leads that are developed often result in long-term business relationships.

"What we're trying to do," Witmer said, "is expand and diversify the customer base for Pennsylvania agricultural products."

The value of Pennsylvania agricultural exports has risen by more than $126 million since 1986. The most recent numbers (for federal fiscal year ending Oct. 1, 1990) show exports totalled $295.1 million, up another $24.9 million over the previous year. Through increased participation in overseas trade shows, the Department of Agriculture has helped foreign buyers discover quality Pennsylvania products such as candy, snacks, grocery items, beverages, lumber, logs, wood products and food handling equipment.

In addition to its promotional activities, the International Trade Division undertakes a variety of educational and technical programs, including seminars, credit information, and freight assistance.

To find out more about how the Division can help export Pennsylvania agricultural products, call Ken Hall at (717) 783-3181.

improvements "simply" through better management of pastures (e.g. lower feed) and cows (e.g. a more condensed calving period). No doubt a similar situation exists in Pennsylvania — more efficient use of resources is likely to be the least-cost method of improving farm profits. The "focus" farms have clearly demonstrated the value of monitoring farm performance — this is the only objective means of determining how successful the farming system is. The new extension concept is also to be adopted on sheep and beef farms this year.

The winter months also saw the announcement of the 1990-91 share milker awards. Sharefarming, which involves shared income and expenses with the farm owner, is a common path to ownership of a dairy farm in New Zealand. About 25 percent of dairy farms have some form of sharemilking arrangement. The winning sharemilkers (and their wives) were selected on the basis of profit, production and management practices, as well as being "ambassadors for the dairy industry."

New Zealand dairymen, like their Pennsylvania counterparts, are struggling to survive with milk prices at c. $4.50 per cwt this season. However, the value of exports are expected to improve as the exchange rate eases down (from $NZ1.00=$US0.62 in October 1990 to $NZ1.00=$US0.55 in October 1991), and there are hopes that trade barriers will be dismantled with the next round of GATT talks.

Cargill Hybrids Available

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Farmers can select from a good supply of Cargill corn hybrids for spring planting. Seed quality and test weight also are very good.

"Despite some early production concerns because of adverse weather conditions in some areas, our seed crop turned out to be very good for both quality and quantity," said Dr. Jack Carlson, Cargill Hybrid Seeds corn product manager.

The company can compensate for drought-related production shortages since more than half of its seed production is under irrigation. In addition, Cargill produces some seed in Florida and Chile each winter to increase production of specific hybrids, he said.

Despite excellent overall seed supplies, it's always a good idea to place seed orders as early as possible since the availability of certain high-demand hybrids could be reduced later in the order season, Carlson said.

"Our yield data show that Cargill hybrids were extremely competitive this year, even in areas that were faced with stressful growing conditions.

Pioneer Offers Software Catalog

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., has released a comprehensive catalog of its agricultural computer software and education products. The free, full-color publication is being distributed to thousands of farmers throughout the U.S. who own computers.

"The products and services featured in our 28-page catalog were designed to help enhance the productivity and profitability of farming operations by assisting producers with their management and marketing decisions," said Willona Graham Goers, product manager.

Three new products are released in the new catalog, all optional add-on modules for the DollarWise™ Advanced Farm Accounting Program. "These products are the direct result of customer feedback. Our customers expressed a need for new programs to help them budget their money, keep track of financial records for several different farm operators and prepare payroll information," said Goers.

The new DollarWise Budgeting Module allows customers to generate financial reports such as cash flow statements, enterprise income statements and budget account listings. The new DollarWise Multi-Farm Module helps farmers keep records for several farms or individuals.

The third new module, DollarWise Payroll, allows users to set up employee files for each person who works for them with such information as employee, name, address, exemptions, deductions and pay rates. A variety of pay period information can be entered, including hours and overtime work, bonuses and commissions. Payroll checks can be printed directly from the program.

According to Goers, the software catalog contains more than 65 programs — from crop and livestock production to field mapping, marketing, financial management and word processing. Thirty days of customer support is also available free with the purchase of select programs.

To help farmers learn more about the uses and applications of ag software, the catalog includes information about on-site training and teletraining opportunities as well as the Customer Support Hotline, which answer producers' questions by telephone.

The catalog also contains information on regional computer clinics to be held throughout the midwest in December and January. The two-day sessions, which are open to the public, will consist of mini-seminars on both basic and advanced computer program applications.

To receive a free catalog while supplies last, farmers are asked to call Pioneer toll-free at 1-800-338-5878, extension 230, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. central time, Monday through Friday.

Halloran New NFO President

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Steve Halloran, 43, a fifth generation grain farmer from Hastings, Neb., is the new president of the National Farmers Organization (NFO).

Halloran, director of the NFO grain department for the past three years, is only the third NFO president in its 35-year history. In a narrow vote, he defeated DeVon Woodland, a farmer/rancher from Blackfoot, Idaho and NFO president for the past 12 years. It was the first time in an NFO election that an incumbent president has been unseated.

Halloran farms 1,600 acres of irrigated and dryland corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, and wheat.

Halloran has risen through the ranks of the NFO leadership structure since joining the organization 10 years ago. He has served terms as county president, district vice president, state vice president, and Nebraska state president.

Halloran and his wife Ann have two children, Mike and Lindsay.

In accepting the NFO presidency, Halloran said, "I'm totally committed to preserving our cherished family farm system of producing food. I pledge all of the energy, wisdom, abilities, and intelligence that God gave me, to make it possible for my son and daughter to farm if they desire.

"Your children deserve the same opportunity," he said. "The prices of all farm commodities remain too low. We must do more and we can with motivated leaders, staff, and members. I pledge to do my share. As a team, going forward with unity, we will succeed."

Gardner Will Speak At Tomato Meeting

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Dr. Randolph Gardner, from the North Carolina State University Experiment Station, will be the principal speaker at the Northeast Regional Tomato Growers meeting on January 9 at Thompson's Dairy Bar at Newton, Lackawanna Co.

A graduate of Cornell University, Gardner has been involved in tomato research at the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station in North Carolina for 12 years. His primary responsibility has been to develop new tomato varieties of good quality and disease resistance to help growers stay competitive in eastern markets. Such well-known varieties as "Mountain Pride," "Mountain Delight," and "Mountain Spring" have been developed by Gardner.

Having been raised on a vegetable farm, Gardner can relate to grower problems in his research and in his presentations at meetings.

All commercial tomato growers, both fresh market and processing, are invited to attend the meeting, which will start at 9:30 a.m. on January 9. Reservations are $10 and should be mailed to the Lackawanna County Cooperative Extension, 200 Adams Avenue, Scranton, PA 18503 by December 31. Directions to the meeting place are also available on request by calling the extension office at (717) 963-6842. Phone reservations will be taken up to January 6.

Other speakers on the program include Dr. Cyril Smith and Dr. Alan MacNab from Penn State University; Tom Jurchak, Lackawanna County extension agent; and Joseph Colangelo, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. This meeting will provide training credits for private applicators of restricted use pesticides.

U.S. Reps Talk Dairy

Maryland Correspondent
ORLANDO, Fla. — This year National Milk Producers Federation invited U.S. Rep. Charles W. Stenholm, D-Texas, Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., and Bruce Gardner, assistant secretary for economics for the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to participate in the annual "Dairy Debate."

Stenholm said the 90's are not the 70's. Three of the 18 members of the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee identify with the farming industry, he said adding that they believe current policy is sufficient so there were not enough votes to make a change.

There is a dwindling understanding of the problems facing the American farmer, Stenholm said.

In 1916 when NMPF became a reality, there were nearly 5 million farms. Today the number of dairy farms with milk cows is just over 150,000.

"Government cannot continue to dominate the dairy industry," Stenholm said. "Issues demand attention soon!"

According to the senator, some answers we need are to questions of: how will surpluses be handled if government backs out? Should producers be responsible for supply and demand? How can co-ops better represent their members?

Stenholm said co-op members are complaining to him that their co-ops are not meeting their needs.

He said, "Go home, try one more time at the grass roots level to come to unity for the benefit of members."

Gunderson, ranking minority member of the House Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy and Poultry echoed Stenholm's view that there is no sympathy in Congress toward agriculture, outside of the Ag Committee.

"We had what we believed was a dairy bill compromise, a national not a regional bill, but NMPF withdrew its support and therefore it was not taken to the floor for vote," Gunderson said, critical of the mixed messages sent by NMPF.

He said the bill was not perfect — the budget agreement is a real concern — but the dairy farmers of America lost $940 million because the bill was not presented for House vote.

Gunderson said the U.S. has the best food supply and the cheapest in the world. He said U.S. also has the best medical treatment, which is the most expensive in the world.

Bruce Gardner, an USDA's economist said our market is still driven by supply and demand. Raising the support price of milk would be counterproductive, he said. It would bring the market adjustments to a halt and insure a chronic tendency to overproduce.

In the period since 1950, production per cow in the United States has almost tripled, growing 2½ percent per year for the 40 years between 1950 and 1990. Labor productivity in U.S. milk production - output per hour of labor - grew at almost an 8 percent annual rate.

Cattlemen and hog producers have had much less support from government than the dairy industry. The producers of these commodities have seen their incomes grow just as fast as dairy farmers. During 1987 - 1990, the estimated annual rate of return on invested assets was 2.6 percent for dairy farmers, 2.8 percent for cattle producers and 3.9 percent for hog producers.

"The condition that seems most important for farmers to earn reasonable returns on their labor and investment is that the overall economy is prosperous," said Gardner. "The better the economy, the higher the returns in dairy."

This is due to investment in dairy enterprises occurring only when such investment looks promising as compared to the alternatives, including nonfarm alternatives, he said.

Gardner said that in the past, dairy farmers have, in exchange for a small amount of defense against low prices, given up prospects for higher prices. "We are economic hostages to government policy," Gardner said. "Let's try another way."

"Grassroots Lobbying-It Involves You," was addressed by Michael Dunn, president of Michael Dunn and Associates, Inc. He explained the process of policy making and how government operates.

"Every time a policy or bill is enacted into law, some Americans win, some Americans lose. Some Americans benefit, some Americans are hurt," Dunn said.

Compromise is a winner and a loser, he said. Compromise is the engine that drives the machine for Americans to come together to make a nation.

Every congressman has his own business which is his congressional district. His profit is everything above 50 percent of the votes on election day. We live in a highly competitive, special interest democracy Dunn said.

"Those who have the least political power or clout are those who don't vote. Second are those who only vote and third are those who are the players. The ones who compete and learn to know their lawmakers are the players in the political system," said Dunn.

If you are not a player, you are a victim who lives with the results of the players, he said.

"Our crisis is in the American people. Sixty percent are registered to vote, with only 36.4 percent voting. This translates to 11 percent of the American people deciding who sits in Congress."

NMPF Explains Farm Bill Decision

Maryland Correspondent
ORLANDO, Fla. — The National Milk Producer Federation at its delegate session defended its position to walk away from the 1991 Dairy Bill.

The federation came under heavy criticism earlier in the week from Congressional leaders for pulling support from the bill.

A teleconference was held the week before Thanksgiving with NMPF Executive Committee members unanimously voting to withdraw support because they felt there were no guarantees for dairy farmers and doubts about any increase in price supports.

No caps were placed on assessments, some assessments were committed into 1996. Another persuading factor were the 60 amendments attached to this bill before it ever came to the floor. NMPF supported a $1 support price increase and 11½ cents for budget balancing and the heifer diversion program.

Fred Butler, NMPF secretary-treasurer, during an interview said that NMPF has a committee in place that is in the process of developing a "Self-Help Dairy Program" since it is not likely dairy farmers are going to receive help from the government.

They will be meeting with leading congressmen, senators and USDA personnel the second or third week of January to see what can be done to bridge the gap for farming income Butler said.

The purpose of the "Self-Help Dairy Program" will be to:

— Permanently idle approximately 300,000 lactating dairy cows and heifers due within 60 days. This program would be controlled by the dairy industry. The objective is not to remove dairy-men, but to remove cows.

— The supply/demand balance of milk has a dramatic impact on producer milk prices. The present surplus of approximately 4.5 billion pounds of milk can be removed by idling 300,000 dairy cows; which will, in turn, dramatically increase producer milk prices. (300,000x15,000 pounds = 4.5 billion)

— If we assume that 300,000 cows must be idled and a $500 over-slaughter price will be required to buy these cows, then the cost would be $300,000x$500 or $150 million.

— An assessment would be collected through milk check assignments from those producers and co-ops participating. Depending on the level of participation, the cost per hundredweight (cwt) would vary from 12 cents per cwt at 100 percent participation to $.25 per cwt at 50 percent participation which would be the required absolute minimum.

— Producers could expect their milk prices to increase by $2 to $3 per cwt, based on a tighter supply/demand balance.

In commenting on a timetable for a "Self-Help Dairy program" Butler said, "We need immediate relief, but we're probably looking at six months."

The question asked is where will these 300,000 cows go? Foreign countries are asking for heifers and cows. Russia is said to be able to handle 400,000 heifers. Some countries may need to be subsidized from the dairy assessment to purchase the animals.

Many details need to be worked out, Butler said, but NMPF is hopeful to soon have a "SELF-HELP DAIRY PROGRAM" in place.

We have thousands of gallons of the highest quality, industrial grade paint available as a result of military base closings and cancelled government contracts. All these paints are made to comply with strict federal specifications by manufacturers who mainly supply the industrial markets. Many were designed for extreme duty making them a superior choice for farm applications.

Look over the list below and call for more details. Even though we have shipments coming in regularly, we cannot guarantee what we have today we'll have next month. So, buy now while we have it - most can be stored for several years.

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm.
John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

NEW From Zook*BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built ★ Better Value

The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wrangler 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications

- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

Future Animal Agriculture Trends Seminar Set

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The third annual Future Trends In Animal Agriculture Conference, to be held on Feb. 13, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Bethesda, Md., is to focus on the topics of public perceptions, media responsibilities and corporate opportunities.

The purpose of the one-day conference is to promote mutual understanding among a variety of interest groups, academicians and individuals concerned about agriculture by providing a non-hostile forum for participants to discuss and hear opinions and views about animal issues.

This year's program begins at 9 a.m. with opening remarks by Robert Zimbelman, of the American Society of Animal Science, followed by keynote speaker William Heffernan, professor and chair of the Department of Rural Sociology, of the University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.

Heffernan has been documenting the growing concentration of the food business into a few firms.

A panel of representatives of corporations involved in agricultural businesses is scheduled to include Alan Parker, investor relations manager for Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream Co., and Richard Gady, vice president of public affairs for ConAgra Inc.

Two businesses which have been invited to send representatives to sit on the panel include Giant Food Inc., and McDonald's Corporation.

At 10:15 a.m., the panel and keynote speaker are to open to questions from the audience.

Following a short coffee break, a media panel is scheduled to talk. The panel is to be comprised of Ron Hayes, president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters; Dan Looker, a writer with the "Des Moines Register" and 1991 Ag Journalist of the Year; and Vandana Mathur, Washington editor for "Feedstuffs."

A half hour is to be set aside for questioning the media representatives.

After lunch, the theme for the rest of the afternoon is "Obstacles and Opportunities," and features speaker Jim Mason, an attorney and journalist, author of "Animal Factories," a critique of intensive animal confinement.

A mixed panel of those concerned with the poultry industry is to speak and time is set aside for questions from the audience. The panel is to consist of Bob Hall, with the Institute for Southern Studies; Toby Moore, Poultry Times; William Robinson, and integrated poultry producer; and Henry Spira, with the Animal Rights Coalitions.

After a mid-afternoon break, the speaker is to be Kathleen Marigan, a staff aide to Sen. Patrick Leahy, who is chairman of the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee.

Also scheduled is Robert Norton, director of the information staff for ARS, with USDA.

Following a question period, David Brubaker, with PennAg Industries, is to give a summary of the conference.

Brubaker coordinates the conference-sponsoring Future of Animal Agriculture Council. The council consists of individuals from various organizations "who seek to enhance public dialogue about the nature and future direction of animal agriculture."

The council and the annual conference were started in 1989 by the Humane Society of the United States and PennAg Industries Association.

The conference attendance is limited. Early registration fees are $70 for business, government or university representatives; $50 for individual and farmers; and $20 for students. Early registration must be made by Jan. 30.

To register at the door costs $20 above the early registration fees, except for students, whose registration is $10 more at the door.

Grange Calls For Pest Control Ag Exemption

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers are once again caught in the middle, according to the legislative director of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

This time it is the unfair taxation of pest-control services used by farmers which was not the initial intent of the record $3.3 billion tax increase approved by legislators in August.

The Pennsylvania House and Senate have been debating about eliminating the 6 percent sales tax on certain consumer items, including pest-control services for farming.

Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh said the original legislation was meant to tax pesticide use in lawn care service. But after it was passed, the language was read on broader terms which encompassed farmers' use of pest-control services. This tax has been repealed in the House and Senate and is going back to the House to concur with Senate amendments before going to the governor.

"The Grange urges our legislators to keep the agricultural exemption in these amendments and encourages them to move the legislation through quickly so farmers are not financial burdened any further," Shambaugh said. "The 6 percent sales tax would not send a family farm into financial ruin, but when combined with all the other taxes and permit fees of farmers, it adds another burden to the people who are the backbone of the Pennsylvania economy."

Lancaster Farming Staff
EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The top colored breed herds on test in Lancaster County were recognized by the Red Rose Dairy Herd Improvement Association during its banquet recently.

While the non-Holstein breeds are in the minority, the owners of the various dairy breeds report that having a different breed cow does not mean that management is much different.

(The top milk-production Holstein herd, owned by Roger Mills, was reported in the Dec. 14 issue of Lancaster Farming.)

This past year presented some of the same management problems to many dairymen. The effect of the drought on availability, cost and quality of feed changed some feeding programs. It resulted in involuntary cuts in rolling herd milk and milk component production at many farms.

The price of milk and the recession caused some dairymen to add a cow or two to the milking lineup, in an attempt to increase cash flow.

Others eliminated a cow or two to shore up the herd and looked hard to cut other operating costs.

Those production leaders among the DHIA colored breed dairy farms in Lancaster had their share of changes.

Warren Schmuck, of Furniss Road, in Peach Bottom, had the top Ayrshire herd in Lancaster County. Last year, he had a rolling herd average of 14,939 pounds of milk, 597 pounds of fat and 507 pounds of protein. He milks about 76 Ayrshires.

Schmuck, who also plays organ at the United Methodist Church in Quarryville, had a milk production record this past year on the same number of cows that went up to 15,600 pounds of milk, 626 pounds of fat and 526 pounds of protein.

At first glance, the comparison of records would indicate that Schmuck changed something of his feeding program to increase production. But he said that is not the case. He said his herd's production was just making a comeback.

This is the third year in a row that Schmuck's herd has been the top Ayrshire herd in the county. Even with a drop in production.

"The year before (1989) we were at 15,500 (pounds of milk). It dropped in 1990 because of poor feed," he said, adding that the feed — alfalfa hay and corn mostly — he used this past year was better quality.

Schmuck, 34, is single and works on a 112-acre farm. About 65 acres of the farm is tillable and the crop is mostly corn, though he does raise a little bit of hay and rye for feed. The rye is planted as a double crop over the corn. It's a cover crop and in the spring he takes it in for ryeilage.

For the past seven or eight years Schmuck has used a total mixed ration for his herd. "When I switched I got a steady increase for about a year," he said.

The switch also gave him more confidence in his managing skills. "I know exactly what to give them and they get what they need," he said. He uses a nutritionist from Virginia who has established a route in the vicinity of the farm.

Though he's single, Warren doesn't operate the farm alone. His father, Larry Schmuck, DVM, does all the breeding, while brother-in-law, "Tex" Hambrick, does field work and helps with the milking.

Schmuck's DHIA records indicate that 25 percent of his milking string this past year was first-time milk cows. His culling rate was 28 percent of the herd.

Experts say that 30 percent replacement rate is about normal, to allow for culling for "voluntary reasons," not because a cow won't milk at all.

Right now, Warren said the culling decisions are primarily based on breeding problems. "Over half of the herd are 2- and 3-year-olds," he said, adding that eventually as the young cows age, production should increase.

All replacement animals are raised on the farm. He doesn't buy replacements. To breed those replacements, he said he concentrates on using bulls "that throw size and strength."

With his father the veterinarian doing all the insemination, the number of services per pregnancy is averaging just over two. They also have the calving interval down to 12.8 months. Their somatic cell count is 149,000/c 2soine

But Warren said that having his father as a veterinarian doesn't ensure that his cows get better treatment than those cows owned by his father's clients. "Sometimes we're the last one he sees," Warren said, then laughed.

The farm has an old bank barn, but 14 years ago a freestall parlor barn was built.

"The cows are used to it now," Warren said. "I like a parlor, (Editor's Note: We continue the coverage of the Lancaster County Red Rose DHIA annual meeting and year-end reports from Page 1 of the December 14 issue of Lancaster Farming. At that time, we did an on-farm profile of the Spring Belle Farm of Roger and Darrel Mills who had the highest milk and protein production with their well-known Registered Holstein herd. In addition, we reported on the annual meeting where the Lancaster group declined centralization with the state organization, and we listed top production and management records related to individual herd records, top producing cows by protein by breed, individual herd records for somatic cell count and the comparative results of fifty years of testing.

This week we have Vern Achenbach's profiles of all the color breeds, the report of Lancaster's centralization committee, by John Howard, and the top lifetime production records that are either over 200,000 pounds of milk or 6,000 pounds of butter fat.)

though it took a while to get used to. It saves bending a lot. It's easier on the knees," Warren said.

Barring any great changes this next year, Schmuck said he expects production at the farm to stay about the same. He said the freestall barn is at capacity and there are no plans to expand.

Why Schmuck uses the Ayrshire breed goes back to his youth.

"That's what I started with. Anybody can milk Holsteins and do a decent job. (But) you can go to the top of the line faster with other breeds; make a name for yourself. There's not much competition.

"As far as which breed, I say it's all the same; like what kind of car you drive, or what kind of tractor you have.

"If one was really better than another, then everyone would have them. And with protein prices coming on line, the colored breeds are better off," he said.

Not too far away from the Schmuck farm, geographically, is Star Point Jerseys, a business owned by John and Cindy Batchelder.

Early this year, the Batchelders moved from an Oxford, Chester County rental farm to a farm in Quarryville in which they formed a partnership with Robert Ulrich.

Since then, their 45 milking Jerseys made an average of 15,378 pounds of milk, 720 pounds of fat and 585 pounds of protein.

There were some big changes for the Batchelders. They bought 23 percent of the herd of registered female Jerseys over the past milk record year, which ended September 30. The couple culled and replaced 22 percent.

"We increased our herd dramatically over the last year. When Bill had his dispersal last year we bought five and then seven to 10," Cindy said, adding that most were springing heifers, which freshened within several weeks of the move — during and right after.

"We were at 23 (Jersey) cows last year. Now we're up to 45," she said.

The Batchelder also have a Holstein herd on test and they experienced a decrease in production from them, which Cindy said was caused by the move of the herd. The Holsteins dropped rolling herd average from 1990's 22,153 pounds of milk to 21,003 pounds of milk.

However, she said production should increase on both herds next year — they switched to a total mixed ration and are getting operations down a little slicker.

"We got the TMR working now and we're feeding cottonseed. I think we're feeding the cows a lot cheaper than we were a year ago, but we're not where we want to be in terms of production yet."

The goal isn't a magic number, but as much as is possible, she said. And there are some other things that the couple said they are looking to concentrate on next.

"We still have some areas we're trying to get worked out," she said, "Like the dry cow program. I feel like we could make some improvement as far as forage quality. It was kind of a tough year with it being the first year (here) and a drought year."

The switch to cottonseed was very recent. "We started cottonseed about a month ago, and we held production and went up in test, and it cut feed costs, especially with price of cottonseed right now," she said.

They got to using cottonseed after reading about it and having their nutritionist mentioned it. "We had him do a comparative ration analysis," she said. The numbers worked out well and the couple bought a trailer load of cottonseed and will probably buy another load within the next few months, she said.

The farm of Axel Linde and Mildred Widmann, a brother and sister team which jointly operates the county DHIA's top milk-producing Guernsey herd, saw a slight drop in production.

With about 56 Guernsey cows milking, Linde and Widmann produced 16,166 pounds of milk, 728 pounds of fat and 570 pounds of protein over the past year.

Last year, the two's herd made, with one additional cow milking, an average lactation of 16,554 pounds of milk, 747 pounds of fat and 578 pounds of protein.

Management-wise, they bought no outside replacement cows or heifers, and culled 24 percent of the herd. Also, 22 percent of the herd were first-calf heifers.

Up in the northcentral portion of the county, Richard Wenger, of Manheim, owns the top Red Rose Brown Swiss herd for 1991. His 36-cow milking string produced 17,923 pounds of milk, 693 pounds of fat and 630 pounds of protein.

Last year, Wenger's herd produced 17,185 pounds of milk, 658 pounds of fat and 591 pounds of protein on 30 cows.

He said he attributes to the feed — last year's production which he used this year. Also, after more than 20 years with Brown Swiss, Wenger said that his cows seem to make more milk when less rain falls.

"I would say we were just getting a little more (milk). Maybe the feeding program had something to do with it," he said. "I can't really put my finger on it."

"We pasture and when it rains they seem to not give as much. We were tending a little better. Our silage was a better," he said.

He did increase his herd size slightly, by six cows, which were replacements that came of age and were put on the string to build up his herd a little, he said. He said a large expansion is not the plan.

REORGANIZATION COMMITTEE REPORT

Presented to:

LANCASTER RED ROSE DHIA MEMBERSHIP

This is the text of the report of the Reorganization Committee, delivered on behalf of the committee by John Howard to the membership of Lancaster Red Rose DHIA at their annual meeting

For several years, PaDHIA has been pushing toward a centralized management structure, with a target date of October 1, 1992 to have all counties centralized. What this involves is the dissolving of all county boards, after which all control of the DHIA program would be turned over to the state. They would then administer the testing program from State College, with a layer of "middle management" called regional managers in each region of the state and senior supervisors on the local level. Hiring and firing of supervisors, setting their wages, and testing fees to dairymen would all be the responsibility of PaDHIA.

While this is needed and welcome in many counties who do not have the cow numbers or the desire to run their own program, in Lancaster County the situation is much different. Here we have 58,000 cows on test in one county, nearly a fifth of all the cows in the state. In fact, our size ranks us in the top 30% of all state DHIA's nationally.

As a county board, we had many questions, the most obvious being, "What will the costs be to our members?" We could never get an answer to this, and in fact to this day have never been told what the testing fees would be in the long run. Their normal procedure when bringing a county in is to negotiate a fee structure that is good for 1 or 2-years, depending on the financial state of the county at time of merger. Our concern was what would happen after that, and we could never get any commitment on this. Their answer to questions about future cost was "We (the state board) are all members just like you, so we'll be fair, trust us." We, as a county board, did not feel comfortable recommending centralization to you, our members, on this basis. As one of our board members said, it would be like going to a machinery dealer to buy a new tractor and the dealer saying, "Well, we can't tell you now what the final price will be, but just go ahead and buy it and we'll tell you in 1993 what it's going to cost you."

Also, we could see some disadvantages possible if we would centralize:

1. Our very high cow concentration gives us low cost per cow because of low overhead and local management. There is no way PaDHIA could do this at the same cost from 125 miles away.

2. Local control and hiring of supervisors leads to higher morale and lower turnover.

3. Local training and supervision of supervisors costs less.

4. If testing fees were the same all over the state we could be subsidizing the higher cost areas, especially if supervisors start getting paid for mileage. (We don't ask other areas to help pay for our higher land costs, rent, and taxes, and don't think we should help pay for higher testing costs in other areas.)

5. If we didn't like the way it was working out, we couldn't go back, because the county organization would no longer exist.

Also, we could see no real advantages of centralization. In the DHIA Focus column in Lancaster Farming on November 2, ten reasons were listed in favor of centralization. There was not one of these reasons that applies to Lancaster County that centralization would solve. In fact, last January at our joint board meeting with our supervisors, PaDHIA General Manager Dick Barth was asked what advantages centralization would offer to Lancaster. He admitted that he couldn't tell us there would be any real benefits for us. He told us to study it, and if it's not good for your members and supervisors, don't do it.

At our February 25 county board meeting, our directors began raising some questions about advantages and disadvantages. Also raised was the question, "Is there any provision for counties who do not want to merge, to continue to work with PaDHIA as they do now?" Our state directors said no. We had to assume then that our options were to 1) centralize or 2) go elsewhere for the services we need.

The "Reorganization Committee" was appointed, consisting of myself as chairman, President Clifford Blank, Dave Dum, Joe Graybeal, Gordon Hoover, with Jay Mylin, County Manager, as resource person. The committee had to answer two questions: 1) Is centralization best for our members and supervisors and 2) if not, do we have other options.

NMPF Offers Hope For Dairy Industry

Maryland Correspondent

ORLANDO, Fla.— The National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) met in Orlando, Florida, this past week for their 75th Annual Meeting and Dairy Summit. The theme, "Continuing the Tradition," was used throughout the meetings to take a look at how far we have come and where we go from here.

NMPF President James P. (Tom) Camerilo Jr., and NMPF CEO James C. Barr, welcomed more than 1,400 dairy farmers and co-op members from across the country in a joint opening message.

Camerilo reflected when NMPF was getting its start prior to World War I, it took a dairy producer 3 hours and 40 minutes to produce 100 pounds of milk. Today it takes just 10 minutes. In those days virtually all milk markets were local and communication was poor.

"There was a need," he said, "for a national organization to act as a clearing house for information that would aid milk producers in bargaining for the best price for their product. The result was the formation on Feb. 16, 1916 of National Milk Producers Federation, an organization based on the cooperative principle that many dairy producers working together are definitely stronger than any one of us pursuing a goal alone."

Barr said, "A thread that runs through the history of the Federation... is unity. That concept is as valid today as it was three quarters of a century ago."

The recent defeat of dairy legislation led President Camerilo to ask dairy producers to set realistic goals and remain united behind these goals. "We must abandon unrealistic pursuits, no matter how attractive... we need to abandon ideas that cannot succeed in favor of those that have a reasonable chance of success."

Camerilo continued by stating that, "During this meeting we will consider certain changes in the NMPF structure aimed at making the organization more representative and responsive to the needs of its members. But all these changes can never spell success unless we all are willing to abide by the decisions of the majority."

The "soul of America" is at risk, he said, adding that there is more than just the future of dairy farmers at stake. The future of rural America is on the line. Small town after small town is dying, he said.

To support that warning, Camerilo said that a report recently on the CBS Evening News reported that for every seven dairy farmers that fail, another business in rural America goes belly up.

"The future lies in balancing the needs of consumers and efficient milk producers of all sizes. Getting to that future is going to require some tough, innovative, decisions," Camerilo said.

Barr urged members to forge a legislative game plan that would succeed early next year. "If we can agree on a politically realistic plan, and stick to it, we can pass legislation that will benefit both consumers and dairy farmers. If we cannot agree on a legislative solution that's achievable, then let's shift gears and find another means of securing a bright future for our industry."

"Ours is a proud heritage. Looking around this room, I see the people that make up the 'soul of America'," he said. "Vital, durable, resourceful people who are an important part of the fabric that holds our nation together and makes it strong. Together there is no obstacle we can't negotiate. We will succeed tomorrow, just as we did yesterday -- by uniting behind a common goal for the common good."

REORGANIZATION COMMITTEE REPORT

During March and April, committee members along with Jay Mylin and an outside hired consultant conducted a fairly thorough research of the subject. We contacted National DHIA, other state DHIA's, dairy record processing centers (DRPC's), and talked with others familiar with DHIA such as extension personnel. We also talked with our supervisors.

The committee met on April 16 to discuss our findings. There are three basic areas of a DHIA testing program, and we studied them all:

1. Field Service - this involves the supervisors and everything involved in getting the samples and data collected from the farms. This is where about 70% of the cost to members is incurred. This is what we do best, probably as well as anywhere in the country because of our high concentration of cows. Everyone we talked to said we should not give up control of this. We agreed, since if we have control of this area we control the majority of the cost.

2. Laboratory - testing of samples for butterfat, protein and aomatic cell count. Currently this is done by the PaDHIA lab which is an excellent lab, one of the best in the country. Maryland has a lab at Hagerstown that we could use. We could also start our own locally but it would probably not be cost-effective since the high cost of start-up and certification would not be offset by lower labor and sample shipping costs.

3. Data Processing - calculating the records and producing your reports. There are only nine processing centers in the U.S. Some states, like Pa. still do their own, but many states use some of the larger, regional centers. In processing records, once the computer programs are developed, the more cows going through the center, the less the cost per cow.

As a county organization, we must be affiliated with a state to be certified by and hold membership in National DHIA (NDHIA). We looked at prices from Maryland for certification and lab service. For processing, we looked at the DRPC's at Provo, UT, and Raleigh, NC.

We found the prices to be very competitive; in fact, lower than we have now. We also found that these other organizations were very eager to work with us. The two processing centers that we looked at had some advantages and were farther ahead of Pa.

The answers to our two questions, then, were: 1) No, we did not think it was best for our members and supervisors to centralize, and 2) Yes, we did have the option of going elsewhere for service.

It was decided, however, that before we pursue other options any further, we should ask PaDHIA if they would be willing to change their position and work with us on a lab and processing basis only, allowing us to maintain our county organization.

We thought this was a very good idea, not only for Lancaster County members, but for the whole state as well, for two reasons:

1. We would be delivering nearly 1/5 of their total lab and processing business with very little of the costs and headaches of field service. This large volume with relatively low cost would keep costs down for all PaDHIA members.

2. Competition - The existence of a large segment of business that is independent and could go elsewhere if prices got too high would force the state to keep costs down, ultimately benefitting members statewide.

At our April 22 county board meeting, the committee's research and findings were presented to the board. The board adopted the following course of action: 1) Do not centralize. 2) Try to negotiate with PaDHIA to provide lab and data processing for us and 3) if this fails, continue to pursue our other options. The committee was instructed to set up a meeting with PaDHIA staff to begin these negotiations.

On August 16, the committee met with Dick Barth, Jim Garriety and Dean Amick in Lancaster. We outlined the board's position, as stated above. They said they did not have the authority to allow us to work in this way; that would have to be a state board decision. They suggested we take our proposal to the state executive committee.

I talked with state president Bill Ite by phone and told him of our board's position. We set up a meeting for October 1, their regularly scheduled meeting. As to our position, he asked me, "Are you guys serious?" I told him we were.

At our August 26 board meeting, I announced the October 1 meeting date between our committee and the PaDHIA executive committee. We again discussed our position and agreed that while we hoped we could work something out with PaDHIA, we were prepared to go "on our own" if we couldn't. A motion to this effect was passed unanimously by our elected directors.

On October 1 our committee travelled to State College to meet with the state executive committee. Again we stated our position, gave our reasons, and asked them to consider working with us for lab and processing while allowing us to continue to operate our own field services. We stated that we were prepared to go elsewhere for these services if necessary. During the meeting, one of the executive committee members restated our position back to us just as we had presented it to be sure they understood what we were asking.

We asked for an answer by January 15, since that would allow the state board time to discuss it, three months to work on details, and their January 7-8 board meeting to act on it. The next day the state board voted that as of October 1, 1992, Pennsylvania DHIA will provide services to direct members only. In a letter notifying us of this decision, state President Bill Ite stated, "This action means that Lancaster County members will not be able to get service of any kind from PaDHIA starting next October unless they are direct members of the state association. It also implies that if a separate association still exists in Lancaster County at that time, then the PaDHIA will compete with it for membership."

After we learned of the state board's decision, we did what we had said we would do — began pursuing our other options. Jay Mylin travelled to the Maryland lab at Hagerstown and also contacted the processing centers at Provo and Raleigh. The committee met on October 22, including county vice-president Bob Wenger and extension agent Glenn Shirk. Jay presented details on the Maryland lab — he said it was an efficient, well-run lab with low overhead. He also presented cost figures from Maryland and the two processing centers. Costs were very favorable — we could actually save several cents per cow. We decided to go ahead. The next step was to meet with supervisors to bring them up to date and be sure they still supported the county. They were given a questionnaire asking for their thoughts on salary, benefits, etc. with a place at the bottom for them to sign their names as to whether they wished to stay with the county or the state. They took these home and returned them during the next week. Of the 17 supervisors, 16 said they would stay with the county and the other one said he hoped Lancaster and PaDHIA could continue to work together.

On October 23, Dave Dum and I attended a meeting in Mifflintown, which had been called by Bradford County for any concerned members to discuss concerns about centralizations. Four PaDHIA directors were present, including President Bill Ite. At this meeting, we restated our board's position and said we were going ahead with plans.

At the request of some concerned industry leaders, Lancaster Farming editor Everett Newswanger arranged a meeting between state President Bill Ite and myself in Everett's office on November 11. We had a very good, friendly meeting, but I again reaffirmed our position on centralization and said we were preparing to meet with the two processing centers. Later that same week, Lancaster president Cliff Blank met with Bill in Johnstown. About two weeks later, Cliff and I met with one of our state directors; later Cliff also visited with our other state director. At no time during any of these discussions did we receive any indication of a change in the state's position.

About this same time president Cliff Blank sent a letter to our membership, outlining our position. From then on, board and committee members began receiving comments, not only from members, but also from other co-op and industry leaders who overwhelmingly supported the board's position.

On November 15, Bliss Crandell and Steve Smith from the Provo processing center came to Lancaster along with Gene Long from Maryland to show us what they had to offer. Our committee along with five supervisors and Glenn Shirk met from 9:00 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

The following week, on November 19, the same group met with Ken Butcher, Gary Griffin and John Clay from the Raleigh processing center, again with Gene Long from Maryland in attendance. Everyone who saw these presentations was very impressed with both processing centers. They both have more information and options available than we now have and at very reasonable cost and they both offer the individual cow page that many dairymen like. We scheduled a meeting for the afternoon of Monday, November 25, the day of our board meeting, to discuss the information we had received and make a recommendation to the board.

At this meeting, everyone who had seen both presentations was present, and all were asked to comment. The consensus of the group was that, while both were excellent, the Raleigh system would meet our needs a little better and would be easier to change over. Also, they are way ahead in the area of on-farm data entry via supervisors using lap-top computers, whereby many reports can be back in the dairyman's hands before the supervisor leaves the farm on test day. Currently 65% of their data is being entered this way rather than on barn sheets. Both supervisors and committee members alike were excited about using the Raleigh program. It was decided to recommend to the board to proceed with plans to use the Maryland lab and the Raleigh processing center. The committee felt the decision had to be made now to allow time to finalize agreements and especially to get our records transferred from Pennsylvania to Raleigh. A February 1 changeover date was recommended. This would also allow time after that for educational meetings to help members with the change before spring field work starts.

That evening, November 25, our board met with both state directors present. The committee's report was presented. The Raleigh system was explained to the board as well as cost figures for both Maryland lab and Raleigh. A motion to use the services of Mid-East DHIA (Maryland) for laboratory and certification, Raleigh DRPC for processing, with a February 1 changeover date, was presented. President Cliff Blank stated that all directors would be asked for their opinions. The motion was on the floor for a good half hour or more. Every director spoke in favor of the motion, and many said they were receiving support for this position from their members. After this, the state directors were given opportunity to comment; both said they stood by their state board vote of 10/2/91. The motion passed with all elected directors voting in favor and both state directors against. In the end, the board's decision was made not because we were forced to, but because we wanted to. We are getting a superior-records program for less cost.

The next day Cliff notified Raleigh of our decision and asked about transfer of records from Pa. Maryland was also notified. Cliff then contacted Dick Barth, telling him of our decision and asked him about the cost of getting our records transferred. Dick indicated to Cliff that they had to do something about the situation. Later that afternoon, one of our state directors called me and said "we have to talk about this." He suggested the possibility of working with us just for lab and certification; I said that would probably be the only possibility. He and Cliff had a similar discussion later that day.

On Wednesday, Dr. Stanley Curtis, head of department of dairy and animal science at Penn State, called Cliff to ask if he could come and present to us a letter stating their position. On Saturday afternoon Dr. Curtis and Bill Heald met Cliff and me at Cliff's home. Their letter expressed concern about the current situation, and said that while they support reorganization, it should be accomplished by reason and persuasion, rather than denial of records. I would like to quote a few paragraphs of their statement:

Penn State University's mission is to serve the public to the best of its abilities, but now Penn State employees would in effect be denying records to a considerable segment of the state's dairy industry. This would be unacceptable (and possibly illegal) behavior on the part of a public land-grant education institution.

The Penn State faculty struggled successfully to make AM/PM programs official NCDHIP records for all dairymen in Pennsylvania who elected to use them. Now we want to rally the dairy industry in support of production records for every dairyman in the state, whether centralized, federated, or independent. The operational organization of the program necessarily determines the quality of neither the records produced nor the services rendered to dairymen. The authority to rule is limited to the consent of the governed. A considerable segment of the governed membership of PaDHIA is now challenging the current authority of the PaDHIA. We would hope that reason will prevail, and that Pennsylvania dairymen can remain united in this matter.

As noted above, faculty members of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science at The Pennsylvania State University are in favor of the reorganization of PaDHIA, but would prefer to see it accomplished by reason and persuasion rather than by denial of records. Reorganization of PaDHIA can improve the quality of the total state program, with appropriate leadership. Recent actions by the PaDHIA Board of Directors has unsettled many in the industry and raised concerns among cooperators. It is time to collectively renew our efforts to build a stronger dairy industry in friendly fellowship rather than continue having destructive confrontations.

In their conversation with us, they said that they would support whatever decision we make, but urged us to look at the bigger picture, the unity of the state dairy industry, and give PaDHIA another chance. Cliff and I indicated that we would be willing to talk to our committee and board about the possibility of keeping a tie to PaDHIA through lab and certification.

That same day the state executive committee concluded a special meeting that had begun the previous evening. President Bill Ite called us at Cliff's that afternoon saying they had come up with a proposal for us, but couldn't give us the details over the phone. We asked him for cost figures for lab services; he said they would not have these figures until the next Friday, November 6.

Everett Newswanger, on Monday, suggested that the two committees meet for lunch at his office on Friday, November 6, at which time the two sides could discuss the proposal. Our committee members were contacted and while all agreed to meet, not all agreed that we should reconsider.

On Wednesday, they faxed the proposal to Everett's office. At 1:00 p.m. we called a committee meeting for 2:30 that same day at my home where Everett met us with copies of the proposal. Most of the committee was in attendance. While we had some concerns about some aspects of it, we felt it was still a good proposal and agreed to go ahead with the meeting.

Last Friday, December 6, both committees met at the Lancaster Farming office. Following lunch we began discussions. Their proposal allowed for our members to process at Raleigh, but they had no cost figures for transfer of records. We indicated that it is our intention that all of Red Rose DHIA members' records be processed at Raleigh. They agreed to start as soon as possible the process needed to transfer the records.

They were also willing to provide lab service to us, but to our disappointment were not able to quote us a price on this.

Our main concern with their proposal was that while it made Lancaster a "partner" with PaDHIA, it was business as usual for the rest of the counties, as it stated that the new by-laws going into effect on 10/1/92 would not have to be changed. We, as a committee, could not go along with a proposal that would force other counties, by denial of records, to centralize by 10-1-92 while making us exempt. The whole reason we agreed to reconsider our decision was because of a plea by Penn State personnel to try to maintain state unity. Such a proposal could potentially be more divisive to the state than if we just went somewhere else for service. Also with not even half of the cows in the state yet centralized, there is the potential for the loss of many more cows, especially in counties along the borders, either as individual herds or by groups, if counties are forced against their will to centralize.

For this reason, we asked that the state call a meeting of their board to rescind its decision of October 2, thereby abolishing the 10/1/92 deadline and allowing counties to centralize on their own. They asked us if we would in turn call a meeting of our board to consider their proposal. Cliff agreed on the spot to do so, and even set the time and place for 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, December 10. They did not commit to do so, but said they would let us know on Monday. We left at about 7:00 p.m.

Yesterday morning, Bill Ite called and said they had decided not to call a meeting. We went ahead with our meeting however, starting at 10:00 this morning and concluding about an hour ago. The proposal was discussed and the board passed a motion to authorize the committee to continue to negotiate with PaDHIA. There were two dissenting votes from county board members who felt we should discontinue negotiations with PaDHIA.

This does not at this point change the board's decision of November 25, but simply allows us to also consider PaDHIA for lab and certification before final arrangements are made.

Dear Valued Customer,

We at C B Hooper & Son Inc/Hooper Equipment Inc are planning a special event. As a result of many of our customers updating their machinery inventories over the past six months, our lots are full of good, late-model trade-in equipment. In order for us to make room for new equipment arrivals at our stores, we have decided to offer a special sale, combining the inventories of both our Intercourse, Pa and our Middletown, DE stores. We are calling this event a "CHOPPING BLOCK SALE." Starting prices will be cut every day of the sale, allowing for potential savings to you of up to 20% by the last day of the sale. In order to make this "CHOPPING BLOCK SALE" even more attractive, we are including several dozen items of new equipment.

Over 300 individual pieces of equipment have been made available. Due to the large size of this event, tractors and implements will be located at the store where they were traded. Pictures of all sale items will be available at both stores. This will allow you to preview any items that might be of interest at the most convenient location.

We appreciate your business. We hope that you can use this special opportunity to acquire some machinery items you need at special savings.

WINCO PTO GENERATORS

Power fails at the worst possible time—restart your whole farm with the number one PTO generator the world over!

ENERGX Corporation, the world's largest PTO generator manufacturer, designs Winco PTO units from the ground up for farm standby power. Built to handle motor loads for the duration of the power outage, and rated for continuous duty operation.

Big motors in your feed room groan to a halt. Vent fans, milk coolers stop. There are no lights, no heating, and no power in the house. For how long? Nobody knows! But with a Winco PTO generator, your farm will be back in business in minutes.

Winco PTO generators are available in sizes from 8KW to 75KW continuous duty. The Maxi-Watt® field coil windings provide extra capacity to restart a big farm at the busiest time of the day.

Winco PTO units will run a combination motor load of up to 1 HP per KW.
